THERE seems to be little doubt about Senator Edmunds' re-election. There ought to be none. Mr. Edmunds combines ability with integrity and long legislative experience in the senate. A basswood statesman from Vermont would find it very difficult to rattle around in the shoes of the senior senator from the Green Mountain state.

The board of school lands and funds of this state has decided that after a single individual has leased educational lands from the state amounting in the aggregate to 640 acres, he has exhausted his privileges and thenceforth the state will issue no more leases to him, whether he has disposed of his old leases by assignment or otherwise. The board held that this was the intent of the legislature, and that it would not stop the injurious speculation in school lands to hold that the law meant that no man should hold at one time more than the limit prescribed by law. You can get one section once and no more than once, as a lessee under the decision of the board.

THINGS will be hot this week in old England. The debate on the second reading of the home rule bill has opened, and there will be over a hundred speeches made before its close. The prospects for the passage of the bill to a third reading are not very brilliant, but the leaders on both sides feel that it is a close contest, and every method of vote getting will be essayed. In view of the closeness of the fight, Gladstone's friends have concluded that the best thing to do in case of defeat is to ask of the queen a dissolution of parliament and an appeal to the country, and they confidently predict a majority for him at the outcome of the next race.

THE Army and Navy Gazette commenting on Van Wyck's attack on Gen. Logan's army bill, bethinks itself of the old man's regard and adds: "Our first recollection of the senator from Nebraska, Van Wyck, is of his being under arrest by order of Gen. McClellan for violating orders against the appropriation of rebel property. He was then a member of Congress from Ulster county, N. Y., Colonel of the 56th New York volunteers, and the same dangerous demagogue that he now is, and always will be. He has much to say about bloated corporations, railroads among others, yet we venture to affirm that if his pocket book was examined that it would be found to contain more railroad passes than that of any other senator.

HERR MOST, the roaring lion of anarchy, after being released on bail furnished by his ardent admirers, failed to make his Saturday night meeting in New York a success. As his promised sensation savored more of stale beer than blood, he had better fall back on his entrenched position under the bed.

BROADWAY, New York, is to have an underground railroad. As the legislature has passed the bill and the governor signed it, hoodle aldermen will not be given the chance to twist $10,000 greenbacks around their fingers when explaining why they were induced to give a valuable franchise for nothing to voracious capitalists.

THE finding of nine bodies surreptitiously buried in a suburb of Chicago, suggests that more anarchists were killed during the recent riot than have been known and reported. The anarchists carried off their dead and wounded exultingly and have striven to conceal the number of their casualties for fear of discouraging the followers of the red flag.

THE B. & M. office at Juniata was robbed, last Sunday night, the safe being blown open, and $70 in money taken, besides many other articles of value around the office. The company offers a reward for the apprehension of the robbers, suspicion falling on two or three tramps who were lounging around the depot during the day.

TURKEY'S reluctance to go to war with Greece is evidence that the advisors of the sultan understand the utter hopelessness of their situation. If they whipped the Greeks, as they certainly would with their large and well drilled army, they would then have to grapple with Russia, or with some alliance forced into the conflict by the indignation with which Europe would certainly be filled by the spectacle of Greek Christians being crushed by the superior number of their Moslem foes.

H. MENSE, a blacksmith at Sigel, Ill., wrote March 22, that he was very lame with rheumatism, he could hardly walk and the joints of his limbs were badly swollen and very sore, and so painful he could scarcely turn in bed. His physician advised him to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The effect was beneficial from the first application, and he is now able to attend to his regular work. This medicine has only to be tried to convince the most skeptical that it is the best treatment for rheumatism. Sold by M. A. Spalding and illey & Walker.
