t Produces Mosquito Nets and Wedding Dresses.

A stranger traveling in Central Amerca expressed great surprise when told y his host that mosquito nets grew on goes in that country. The host further erted that he intended to get a wedg dress from the same tree for

"You don't mean," said the travder incredulously, "that mosquito neting and bridal dresses grow on trees, lo von?"

"That's just what I mean," replied he host.

"All right," said the stranger, who ancied a joke was being attempted at is expense, "let me see you gather the ruit and I will believe you. "Certainly," was the answer, "folow the men and you will see that I peak the exact truth."

Still looking for some jest the stranger followed the two men who were to bluck the singular fruit, and stood by vhen they stopped at a rather small ree bearing thick, glossy green leaves, mt nothing else which the utmost efort of the imagination could convert nto the netting or the wedding garnent. The tree was about twenty feet nigh and six inches in diameter, and ts bark looked much like that of a birch

"Is this the tree?" asked the stran-

"Yes, senor," answered one of the nen, with a smile. "I don't see mosquito netting nor the vedding dress," said the stranger, "and can't see any joke, either."

"If the senor will wait a few minutes ne will see all that was promised and nore, too," was the reply. "He will see that this tree can bear not only nosquito netting and wedding dresses, out fish nets and neck searfs, mourning rape or bridal veils.

The tree was without more ado cut lown. Three strips of bark, each thout six inches wide and eight feet ong, were taken from the trunk and hrown into a stream of water. Then each man took a strip while it was still n the water, and with the point of his tnife separated a thin layer of the inier bark from one end of the strip. The layer was then taken in the fingers and gently pulled, whereupon it came tway in an even sheet of the entire vidth and length of the strip of bark. I welve sheets were thus taken from each strip of bark and thrown into the water.

A light broke in upon the stranger's nind. Without a doubt these strips vere to be sewn together in one sheet. The plan seemed a good one, and the abric thus formed might do he thought, f no better cloth could be had.

The men were not through yet, however, for when each strip of bark had rielded its twelve sheets each sheet vas taken from the water and gradualy stretched sidewise. The spectator ould hardly believe his eyes. The sheet broadened until from a close piece of material six inches wide it be-:ame a filmy cloud of delicate lace over hree feet in width. The astonished zentleman was forced to confess that 10 human-made loom ever turned out ace which could surpass in snowy whiteness and gossamer-like delicacy hat product of nature. - St. Nicholas.

Sickness on the Isthmus.

Dr. Wolfred Nelson, who spent five ears as a practicing physician at Panama and was for sometime a member of the board of health of that state, arfived in New York from the isthmus by the last steamer. In an interview vith a New York World reporter he

"At this present time yellow fever exists in an almost epidemic form. There were forty-three deaths from the lisease in the city of Panama in the nonth of March. In the city of Colon or Aspinwall) there were fifteen deaths rom yellow fever among the canal nen alone. The wet season is now on, and there is much sickness all over the sthmus, owing to the dirty condition of the canal camps, such as one would expect where thousands of laborers have been herded together without the ilightest sanitary precaution. "In October, 1884, a new cemetery or the poor was opened in the city of Panama. Up to the 12th of April, 1886, 3.474 canal hospital patients and the poor of the town had been buried here. Apart from these a number of persons of the better classes are buried n the boredas, or stone vaults. Durng the same interval hundreds have been buried in the foreign, Jewish, and Chinese cemeteries. The death-rate has been suppressed as far as the canal nterests have been able to affect it, and the most unblushing statements have been made by canal papers regarding he death-rate. To show what vellow ever has done on the isthmus it is only necessary to cite the experience of a party that landed with Mr. Jules Dingler on the 29th of October, 1883. The party consisted of thirty-three new-comers. Within a week Count de Duerno siekened and died from yellow iever. His death was followed by that of Mr. Zimmerman. Later Mr. Dingler lost ais daughter, a charming girl. Within one month from the day of her death his son, aged 23, had been given up. In the following year he lost his wife from sellow fever. Out of fourteen cases of rellow fever among that party of thiry-three thirteen died. Such is Panima, which De Lesseps vainly attempts o paint as a tropical garden of para-lise. The filth in both cities and along the canal is simply indescribable. The vilest sights and odors constantly meet one. In this city of Colon the saddest ights are to be seen. Foreigners are illowed to lie on the sidewalk, to be picked up dead. But a few days ago. The Evening Telegram, of Panama, re-'erred at length to the fact that three nen had been found on a single morn-

Mrs. Lincoln's Last Years.

Mrs. Lincoln, the widow of the martyr-President, returned from Europe in October, 1880, and went to Springfield, Ill., where she was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Edwards. During the following holiday season she shut herself in her room, mourning the extravagance of the times, and chiding those about her who displayed gifts of jewelry and there she staved like a veritabride who was to be married on his ble silk-worm in its self-woven cocoon, for many months. What did she do all that time? Principally she overhauled her many trunks, complained that she was very sick, and ate full meals of substantial food three times a day. She reconciled ill health and hearty eating by insisting to the few friends whom she admitted that her malady was a peculiar one, compelling her to consume large quantities of food. She would rise from a repast of roast beef, coffee, etc., and very dejectedly inform her attendant or visitor, that in all human probability she would not see the light of another day, and often, in literal verification of her prophecy, she would close the window-shutters, increase the opaqueness of the curtains by pinning up shawls or quilts, and light a plain tallow candle. She rejected the use of gas as of the devil. If asked to specity where she felt bad in body, she would reply sometimes, "I'm on fire; burning up; just feel of me, and see how hot I am!" At the same time her temperature would appear perfectly normal for a lady above 60 years of age. At other times she would insist that she was "being all hacked to pieces by knives: just feel that gash in my shoulder; don't think I can stand such wounding long, do you?" Yet tender and commiserating friends assured her that there was no trace of either blood or sear. The next year her mind wandered so that her relatives were forced to present her to the Probate Court, and to ask an order that she might be committed to a lunatic asylum. was attired in plain mourning black; the full figure of her Washington era had dwindled till she appeared quite a slender lady, whose shrivelled face expressed no concern in the doings of the hour. She was gentle and yielded without a murmur to the sad-faced wishes of her son and that always firm friend of her great husband, the Hon. Isaac N. Arnold, who appeared in court as her counsel. She had then been occupying rooms at a prominent hotel for some time, and the testimony before the jury of conspicuous citizens ran chiefly to her vast accumulation of unmade dress goods within her rooms, and that she would carry too much money about the streets upon her person, even the sum of $3,000 being found loosely pinned within the folds of her walking dress. The court awarded restraint that should be only kind guardianship of her personal safety and financial interests, and she was led away amid the tears of many bystanders, and was made at home for a time at a private asylum of high repute. - Ben: Perley Poore, in Boston Budget.

Nipped in the Bud.

It looks now as if the anarchist bubble which had been slowly filling with unnatural gas for several years has been pricked so effectively that it has entirely collapsed. The little matinees lattely in Chicago and Milwaukee, which were sat down on so emphaticically, together with the arrest later of the prominent patriots (?) who engineered those affairs, shows that Uncle Sam, though slow, is sure; and a universal spirit of condemnation has at last been aroused towards these foreign would-be-property-grabbers which, if they have any sense at all, they will heed, and go to work instead of shooting off their mouths at crowds on Sundays, when they ought to be at church or at home minding the baby. It is curious to note how the alleged courage of these blatant communists cozes out at their finger ends when real danger threantens them in the shape of the strong arm of Law. Take, for instance, Herr Most, not the least incendiary one of the gang by any means. He has been wanted by the police in New York for some time, and instead of facing the music and voluntarily making a test case of himself-a martyr if needs be -he hunted his hole promptly, and for some time kept hid so very effectively that the officers couldn't find him. They finally located him, however, in a house of ill-fame, and after some search saw him just as he was crawling under a bed, he having concluded that it was a good time for disappearing. When the detectives grabbed him by the legs and hauled him forth, he turned livid with fear, and hoarsely whispered, "Give me liberty." He had no intention of finishing the quotatation-'or give me death," not he. Death was just what he least desired. And it was much the same way with the others of that ilk who were arrested in Chicago and Milwaukee; they had not a particle of the heroism and bravery which actuates men who become martyrs in a just cause. Like a thief caught robbing a hen roost, their chief thought was for their personal safety. At this writing we have not seen the illustrated papers since Most was nabbed, but it is safe to say that they will do the subject justice, as no better chance for a striking cartoon was ever presented. A good one, well worked out in all its details. ought to far exceed the "tattooed man" or "Jack and Me" in popular favor.

The storm has passed-and it wasn't much of a shower either, comparatively. taking the previous assertions of the anarchists as to what they intended to do into consideration-and now the country can breathe casier and settle down to business again, confident that any further demonstrations looking towards uprooting society and distributing wealth and property pro rata among all people, including Hottentots and Digger Indians, will be promptly squelched. A number of valuable lives state to support and give their business to were lost in Chicago by the murderous devices of the cowardly throng, which, devices of the cowardly throng, which, HAIL. OFFICE OF "PLAIN DEALER," CLEVELAND, O., May 26, 1886. Learning that Mr. Chauncy J. Stedwell, train master of the Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati & Indianapolis railway, held one-fifth of ticket No. 76,244 in The Louisiana State Lottery, which had on May 11th drawn the capital prize of $75,-000, a Plain Dealer reporter called on Mr. Stedwell at his residence, 152 Lake street, Wednesday evening. In reply to the reporter's question regarding the matter,

"It is true that the $15,000 drawn by the fifth of this ticket was paid to me, but I only acted as collector for others. The fortunate holders were five employes of the C. C. & I. Ry., in my department, as follows: H. Johnson, brakeman, 461 Sterling avenue; J. Lahiff, conductor, 35 Seymour avenue; Thos. Murphy, conductor, 44 Bailey street; F. Williams, conductor, 75 Delaware street; R. Constant, brakeman, 1187 Lorain street. The ticket was sent for and held by Johnson, and when the men learned of their good fortune, they came to me and urged me to take the ticket, attend to the collection of the money and make the proper division of it I forwarded the ticket to New Orleans and it was promptly paid. Tuesday afternoon (the 25th), the met at my house and I paid each of them $3,000. It has all fallen into good hands and undoubtedly these men and their families will be greatly benefited by their good fortune. It was never my pleasure to see a happier group than that surrounding the table in this room as I handed each his portion of the money.

WHAT SCIENCE SAYS.

The "Fearful and Wonderful" Mechanism of the Human System Graphically Portrayed.

[In the editorial columns of the New York Analyst, H. Lassing, M. D., editor, writes the following beautiful description of the laboratories of the human system. We think we have never read a finer or more trustworthy one.

"Man is the greatest of all chemical la boratories. Magnify the smallest cell of the body and what a factory is spread before the eyes countless chambers in which are globes of air, masses of solid matter, globules of dying liquid; a flash comes and the whole is consumed and needful heat is carried into every part of the system. Electrical forces also generate and are conveyed to the brain, the muscles and the if they try to cure themselves and fail various nerve centers.

In another set of a million chambers we see various gasses and vapors. By chemical action these are changed and purified in the lungs and the skin. The blood we o'ten say is a great living river. In its current are masses which the air in the lungs did not affect; blocks of chalk; slabs of tartar; pieces of bone ash, strings of albumen; drops of molasses, and lines of alcohol. How are these waste masses disposed of? Begin where you will in this great stream you must come to the purifying places of the system. Here is all activity and an invisible force reaches out into the stream. seizes and carries this mass of waste into vast trenches, thence into a smaller reservoir, and finally into a larger reservoir, which regularly discharges its contents.

This separation of lime, uric acid and other waste material from the blood without robbing it of a particle of the life fluid, passes human comprehension. In health this blood purifying process is carried on without our knowledge. The organs in which it is done are faithful servants whose work is silent as long as health remains.

"People strangely wait until pain strikes a nerve before they will realize that they have any trouble. They do not know that pain concerns chiefly the exterior not the interior of the body. A certain set of nerves connect these blood purifying organs with the brain. They may not gnaw and bite as does the tooth-ache or a scratch, but they regularly, silently report. When these organs are failing these nerves indicate it by drawing the blood from the face and cheek, leaving the lip and eye blanched, by sending uric acid and poison into the smallest veins, the skin then becoming gray, yellow or brown. They also prevent the purification of the blood in the lungs and cause pulmonary difficulties. weariness and pain. Who enjoys perfect health, especially in this land where we burn the candle in one mass? The athlete breaks down in the race; the editor falls at his desk; the merchant succumbs in his counting-room. These events should not have been unexpected for nature long ago hung out her "lanterns of alarm." When the "accident" finally comes, its fatal effect is seen in a hundred forms; either as congestion, chronic weakness, as wrong action, as variable appetite, as head troubles, as palpitation and irregularities of the heart, as premature decay, as dryness and harshness of the skin causing the hair to drop out or turn gray, as apoplexy, as paralysis, as general debility, blood poisoning, etc.

"Put no faith then in the wiseacre who says there is no danger as long as there is no pain. Put no faith in the physician, whoever he may be, who says it is a mere cold or a slight indisposition. He knows little, if any, more than you do about it. He can neither see nor examine these organs and depends entirely upon experimental tests, that you can make as well

"If the output is discolored or muddy, if it contains albumen, lymph, crystals, sweet or morbid matter, is red with escaped blood, or rolly with gravel, mucus and froth, something is wrong and disease and death are not far away.

"These organs which we have described thus at length, because they are really the most important ones in the human system, the ones in which a large majority of human ailments originate and are sustained, are the kidneys. They have not been much discussed in public because it is conceded that the profession has little known power over them. What is wanted for such organs is a simple medicine, which can do no harm to the most delicate but must be of the greatest benefit to the afflicted. Such a remedy, tried and proved by many thousands all over the world is Warner's safe cure. With those in whom disease is deep seated it is the only specific. For those in whom the seeds are sown and the beginning of illness started it is an unfailing reliance. It may be recommended to the well to pre vent sickness, and the sick to prevent death. With its aid the great filtering engines of the system keep on in ther silent work without interruption; without it they get out of gear, and then disease and death open the door and cross the threshold." Such writing ought not only to please but to carry conviction that what Editor Lassing, M. D.-so high an authority-says is true, and that his counsel is worthy the attention and heed of all prudent, rightminded people.

disease or derangement of the liver, resulting in poisonous accumulations in the blood, scrofulous affections, sick-headaches, and diseases of the kidneys, lungs or heart. These troubles can be cured only by going to the primary cause, and putting the liver in a healthy condition.
