

The True Model Wife.

To be the loved and honored queen of a happy home, is a destiny which calls for high womanly attributes and attainments.

The model wife understands fully the duties and obligations devolving upon her. She is not a doll to be petted and caressed only, but truly a helpmeet to the husband who has chosen her from all the world to make him happy.

Her affection is not based upon the amount of luxuries with which he is able to surround and fill her life. She is free from selfish extravagance in whatever station she may be placed, and capable of self-denial when necessary, even to the extent of wearing her last season's hat or bonnet—incalculable as this may seem.

The words, "Thy people shall be my people," are to the model wife a precept to be daily practiced. She is truly a daughter to her husband's parents, realizing that to the silver-haired mother who cared for and watched over his childhood and youth, a life long debt of filial love and consideration is due, which is her privilege and duty to assist in repaying. The model wife possesses a loving and lovable disposition, unobtrusive, self-controlled and patient, under the almost daily trials and disappointments which fall to the lot of most human beings, and from which she cannot expect wholly to escape. She possesses and cultivates a sunny, cheerful disposition, free from unreasonableness and childish petulance, and does not consider herself a martyr nor moan over lack of appreciation if life is not entirely a bed of roses. In this connection we often think of the advice given Malcolm in "MacLeod of Dare": "Never marry a sinner," and it is true that nothing so detracts from the happiness of home as a perpetually complaining, sighing wife.

The model wife is not given to fault-finding and scolding, and she never says "I told you so." She is a true housekeeper, and by the exercise of order and womanly taste makes of her dwelling a very house beautiful, an ideal resting place for the bread-winner of her family, of whose peaceful comfort she thinks with longing and anticipation through the busy and often times trying days. She does not clamor for the right of suffrage, nor neglect her family while searching for a mission, realizing indelible right already is here—that of making home happy, and a high and noble mission is involved in so ordering her home life as to influence each member of the family toward a higher and better plane of existence.

She is an intelligent companion, and has a sincere and sympathetic appreciation of her husband's life, of his joys, hopes, aims, and sorrows. She is thoroughly versed in the different branches of household lore. She never places before her husband sour, heavy bread, soggy potatoes, tough burned steak, and most unpardonable of all—muddy, over-boiled coffee, under the plea that "the cook has left." She knows that a man's health and happiness depend in a great measure upon the manner in which his home is kept, and she endeavors to render him comfortable in his daily life. She is always scrupulously neat as to her own attire; she dresses in a becoming and tasteful manner, and does not consider it a waste of time to keep up her practice in music, merely to entertain and please her family. She possesses an invaluable weapon for keeping her matrimonial pathway smooth, namely: tact, a quality which many wise, good wives seem to lack utterly, possessing this valuable trait, when her tired husband returns at evening, she does not pour in his ears a doleful recital of the day's troubles and worries, nor asks him endless questions. She understands full well that a tired, hungry man is generally slightly impatient, if not cross; she greets him, therefore, with an orderly room, invitingly spread table of tempting food, some dainty surprise—his favorite delicacy perhaps—and above all, a smiling, cheerful welcome.

The model wife knows that the influence of a happy home extends far beyond the immediate family circle, and that she must, of necessity, be either a constant help or a woeful hindrance to her husband. Blessed is the man who can truthfully say after a life time of matrimonial companionship: "Sixty years! Sixty years! She made me a better man."

From the moment I kissed her fair young lips, "And our lovers' life began,"—Mary Currier Parsons, in St. Louis Magazine.

Farm and Farmer Both Sold.
And now comes a tale of woe from Burden, Cowley County, which, if true, takes the premium over all competitors. A man who got mad at the country, and longed to sell his farm, received an offer from a Missouri man and accepted it. The Missourian offered him seventeen mules for his farm, agreeing to ship the mules as soon as the deed to the farm was deposited with the mule man's banker. Accordingly the deed was forwarded, and the purchaser looked anxiously for the mules. He did not think of the animals coming by express, until he received notice to call at the office. Upon calling he found seventeen china mules—the price of his farm. He lost no time in going to see his man, but the latter had sold out and skipped.—Leavenworth (Kan.) Times.

They Parted.
"Do you play the piano?" asked he.
"Yes," she replied.
"Sing?"
"Yes."
"Sing the Mikado?"
"Yes."
"Mary, I think we had better part forever."—Merchant Traveler.

He Was Heard.
A little girl hearing a peal of thunder asked: "Ma, what is dat?"
"It is God speaking, darling."
"I dess he must be mad den," she remarked, "for he spoke mos' as loud as pa w'en he found his collar button in de biscuit yesterday."—Collar Courier.

THE SALOON IN POLITICS.

Demoralizing and Disgraceful Agency in American Political Life.

What have the seven thousand saloons of New York city done for her? They have fastened upon her citizens the most shamefully corrupt government ever endured by a community indulging in the illusion that it was free; they have almost made it impossible for an honest, educated man to touch local politics, much less take office; they have degraded the conduct of public affairs to their own low level; they have brutalized every institution they have had to do with; they have perverted and spoiled the democratic system, making a hissing and a reproach of American citizenship and the suffrage, establishing political shambles, pandering to the worst vices of the worst classes, defiling everything decent and pure with their ribald scoffing, and producing at intervals, as proof of their quality, tendencies, and power, such abominable scandals as that of the Tweed ring, or the more recent sale of votes in the board of aldermen. But evil as are the results of the combination between the saloon and the politicians, it is not just to hold the latter responsible for all the mischief they cause. In truth, they are the result of conditions which could not produce anything better, and it is unreasonable to blame the product while refusing to interfere with the generating agencies. The saloon is an arrangement for the maintenance and propagation of the worst vice with which humanity is afflicted, a vice which destroys every elevating influence, kills shame, manhood, ambition, family affection, honor, all that makes life worth living; a vice which fosters brutality, self-indulgence, and all the train of ignoble and degrading passions and inclinations.

Now, the purpose and intent of the saloon being what it is, the developments noted are simply what ought to have been expected when so large a share in the government of the country was permitted to be seized by this sinister agency. The American system of government is theoretically sound. The means of education are accessible to all. But when our children have passed through the public schools and entered into public life, if they wish to take part in public affairs they must descend to the saloon for instruction in politics, and in the same institution the foreign immigrants must graduate before they can exercise the right of citizenship. These are our political schools, in fact, and they give tone to our politics, city, state, and national. The candidate for office finds it indispensable to "make himself solid" with the rum power. He must buy the favor of the saloon-keepers. He must frequent these places and flatter the vanity of those who gather there. Through them he must obtain the votes of the idle, the vicious, the criminal classes. He must become familiar with all the ward "strikers" and loafers. He must be represented at the caucuses, which are always held where drink abounds. He must defer to the views of men of the lowest intelligence. He must subscribe to platforms drawn up by demagogues and time servers. Is it any wonder that self-suspecting men so often shrink from these ordeals, and prefer the obscurity of private life to a political career demanding such sacrifice and such debasement?—Atlantic Monthly.

Flies and the Declaration.

It is wonderful how little matters affect great deeds. I came across a funny story as told by Randall, the man who wrote the large biography of Jefferson, which shows how the signing of the Declaration of Independence was before Congress it had its meetings near a livery stable. The members wore short breeches and silk stockings, and with handkerchief in hand they were diligently employed in lashing the flies off their legs. So very vexatious was this annoyance, and to so great an impatience did it arouse the sufferers, that it hastened, if it did not aid, in inducing them to promptly affix their signatures to the great document which gave birth to an empire. This anecdote I had from Mr. Jefferson at Monticello, who seemed to enjoy it very much, as well as to give credit to the influence of the flies. He told it with much glee, and seemed to retain a vivid recollection of an attack, from which the only relief was signing the paper and flying from the scene. The State Department library is the richest of the offices of Washington in its relics of the Declaration. It has the original draft of Jefferson, and the engrossed parchment signed by the delegates. The two are in a big cherry or mahogany cabinet. They are kept behind glass, and the writing on the parchment has begun to fade, so that now John Hancock's name has almost entirely vanished, and the names of many others of the signers are illegible. In another part of the State Department Library is a case containing the desk on which Jefferson drafted the Declaration. It is only three inches high, and sold when new, for, I suppose, not more than $10 at the most.—"Carp" in Cleveland Leader.

A Dangerous Practice.

"Why, John! what's the matter?" exclaimed a Nipanduck wife. "Your left hand is torn all to pieces and your face is covered with blood. Oh! horrible! I fear you are killed! What shall I do? What shall I do? Where—where have you been? What's the matter? Spook, or I shall go crazy!" "My gun busted," replied the husband, laconically.
"How did it happen, dear?"
"I overloaded it."
"What induced you to overload the gun, my darling?"
"Why, I took one of your pancakes for target and busted the gun trying to shoot a hole through it."
"Oh your infernal brute!" she exclaimed, as she helped herself to a handful of his hair.—Newman Independent.

Hadn't Eaten Anything.

A negro in great pain for a physician. The doctor, upon arriving, asked: "Have you been eating anything calculated to hurt you?"
"Oh, no, sah, not er tall."
"Any fruit?"
"No, sah, not er tall."
"Well, tell me what you did yesterday."
"Well, sah, yistidy maw'nin' I went down to mer datter 'Tildy's house. She wan't at home, an' I sot down to wait fur her. While lookin' er roun' I seed er big water-millon in er tub of water an' I tuck it out an' eat it. Den, as 'Tildy didn't come I went ober ter Unk Ab Moore's house. Da wuz eatin' water-millon an' I jined in. Arter dis, I went down ter de cotton war house. Foun' er ha' er water-millon on er box, an' ez it 'peered to be sufferin' I eat it. I come home 'bout dis time, but ez I didn't hev no appertite fur dinna'h I went out an' got me er water-millon. Erbout er hour arter dis I went ober ter Unk Bill Gray's an' he'p'em eat some water-millon. Dat's erbout all. No, sah, didn't eat nuffin ter hurt me, lissen it wuz er couple er mush-millions dat I eat las' night. Hole on er minit. Lemme see. Oh, yas, I did eat erbout er dozen years er b'iled co'n an' erbout er haizer peck er' peaches.—[Arkansas Traveler.]

Shears or Pair of Shears?

Perhaps some of our readers are critical enough in the use of language to decide whether the customer or the clerk was right in the following dialogue:
Customer (to clerk in a hardware store)—"Show me a small, low-priced shears."
Clerk (facetiously)—"Perhaps you mean a pair of shears."
Customer (severely)—"I mean precisely what I said."
Clerk (defiantly, opening a specimen article)—"Are there not two blades here? and don't two make a pair?"
Customer (triumphantly)—"You have two legs. Does that make you a pair of men?"
The shears were done up in profound silence.—[The Homestead.]

Omitted Great Scott.

Lieut. Geo. Monroe had a day off and went to Nantasket. On the boat, with several friends, there was a talk about personal resemblances.
"Wow! I have been taken for Bismarck in Berlin," said a German gentleman.
"Assi, of a man in Paris. I was as the Count de Paris saluted, so like him I resembled," said a teacher of French.
"That's nothing," said George. "A fellow came up and slapped me on the back right on Tremont street the other day and cried out, 'Great Caesar! Is that you?'"
—[Boston News.]

Odd Names.

Dickens often said the odd names of his characters were not the creation of fancy, but were borne by real people. Americans and Englishmen have been inclined to doubt whether a person could survive the knowledge that his name was Pumblechook, but here are some odd cognomens picked out of a few exchanges: Hockenjoss, Pideock, Snortledge, Weatherwah, Hullfish, Stonaker, Postiethwaite, Wambold, Smallbones, Rookatellor, Luddy, Lum, Crossett, Gouger, Stringellaw and Hornblower.—[Boston Transcript.]

Brave Act of a Flagman.

As a train dashed into Lowell, Mass., on Friday, a small child was seen by the flagman, William Lawler, standing on the middle of the track with his back to the approaching engine. He sprang in front of the train and succeeded in rescuing the child. In the performance of this brave act Lawler himself was struck by the cow-catcher of the locomotive and hurled several feet against a fence bordering the track. His injuries, though serious, will probably not prove fatal. The rescued boy was deaf and dumb.

A Costly Tomb.

Taj, the famous tomb in India on the Agra, built 200 years ago by Shah Jehan, in honor of his favorite wife, cost, says Hugh Wilkinson in "Sunny Lands and Seas," £3,000,000, and took 20,000 men two years to complete. This is equal to 340,000 men in one year, and assuming that the material cost half the money, it appears that the workmen earned, on an average, less than 24 10s a year. "Slaves," you say? Perhaps, but their "keep" must have cost more than that. Guess the boy exaggerated.

Blowing Up Hell Gate.

Has been a laborious and costly work, but the effect justifies the effort. Obstruction in any important channel means disaster. Obstructions in the organs of the human body bring inevitable disease. They must be cleared away, or physical wreck will follow. Keep the liver in order, and the pure blood courses through the body, conveying health, strength and life; let it become disordered and the channels are clogged with impurities, which result in disease and death. No other medicine equals Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" for acting upon the liver and purifying the blood.

There is a demand in New York for the coinage of half cents.

The Proper Study of Mankind is Man.

Says the illustrious Pope. If he had included woman in the list, he would have been nearer the truth, if not so poetical. Dr. R. V. Pierce has made them both a life long study, especially woman, and the peculiar derangements to which her delicate system is liable. Many women in the land who are acquainted with Dr. Pierce only through his "Favorite Prescription," bless him with all their hearts, for he has brought them the panacea for all those chronic ailments peculiar to their sex; such as leucorrhoea, prolapsus and other displacements, ulceration, "internal fever," bloating, tendency to internal cancer, and other ailments. Price reduced to one dollar. By druggists.

And pimples, and other like affections caused by impure blood, are readily cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. While it purifies, this medicine also vitalizes and enriches the blood, and builds up every function of the body. Scarcely a humor of all kinds, swellings in the neck, hives, ringworm, tettes, abscesses, ulcers, sores, salt rheum, scaldhead, etc., are also cured by this excellent blood-purifier.

"I was troubled with boils, having several of them at a time. After enduring about all I could bear in suffering, I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. Four or five bottles entirely cured me, and I have had no symptoms of the return of the boils. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all like afflicted, being sure they will find speedy relief." E. N. NICHOLSON, Quincy, Mass.
