

A Lucky Man.
"A lucky man is rarer than a white crow," says Juvenal, and we think he knew. However, we have heard of thousands of lucky ones, and we propose to let their secret out. They were people broken down in health, suffering with liver, blood and kidney diseases, scrofula, dropsy, and consumption, and were lucky enough to hear of and wise enough to use Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," the sovereign blood purifier, tonic and alterative of the age.

EATEN BY WOLVES.
A Young Man's Terrible Adventure in Dakota.
There passed through St. Paul Sunday en route to the east a man whose appearance was loathsome in the extreme, and whose life in the future will be a burden to him. As a reporter was walking about the Union depot he came upon a man with his face wrapped up so that nothing but his eyes were visible. Thinking perhaps that some accident had befallen him the reporter, accosting him, was told that as soon as an eastern train could be boarded he would let the reporter ascertain for himself as to whether an accident had occurred. As soon as the sleeper was reached the man took from his head the many bandages, and the sight that met the reporter's gaze was a shocking one. The nose and left ear were entirely gone, and the other ear looked as if it had been slit with a knife in a dozen places. Great pieces of flesh had been torn from each cheek, and taken altogether the man's face little resembled the features of a human being. The man gave his name as John C. Hazzard, and his story, which was told with many painful halts, was as follows:

"If you want it I will give you the circumstances of an adventure which has left me in this condition. I am a young man of considerable means, and came from southern Ohio last winter to invest in Dakota lands. I was in St. Paul about the 1st of December, and left over the Northern Pacific for Knife River, Morton county, Dakota. After reaching there I learned that an old friend of mine was living some twenty-five miles from there, and started to pay him a visit. Taking a horse I started out early one morning, thinking I would get there along in the afternoon. I had traveled probably fifteen miles, when one of those terrible blizzards set in. It turned cold suddenly, and the wind cut like a knife. The snow fell so fast that it was impossible to see but a short distance, and losing my bearings I was soon riding around the open prairie, completely lost. I did not stop for a moment, hoping to come across a house or at least some place where shelter could be found. It did not take long to become thoroughly chilled, and my horse began to show signs of exhaustion. Night came on, and I had made up my mind to kill the horse, and seek shelter beside his carcass, when I heard a sound which did not by any means raise my spirits. It was nothing more than a pack of wolves following the scent of our partially covered tracks. The storm had by this time partially abated. The horse heard the howl of the wolves, and made a struggle to increase his pace; but it was no use, for the beast had become so chilled and tired that he could scarcely move. Coming to a little rise in the prairie I saw, a short distance away, a light shining through the window of a shanty, and I thought I was safe. I heard the wolves coming nearer and nearer, and was congratulating myself that I would not be the means of giving them a square meal, when my horse stumbled and fell, with me partly under him, my head striking some hard substance. That is the last I remember until the next day. I was utterward told by the man who lived in the shanty which I was trying to reach, and to whom I owed my rescue, that the howl of the wolves had attracted the attention of his dogs, and together they had driven the beasts off, but not until I had been almost killed. I was with a ten rods of the shanty when found. I will stop in Chicago to see if something can not be done for me, and if not will go to Europe. At first I feared hydrophobia, but the wounds are healing and I may escape that. I have had the wounds cauterized. I have heard of instances where an artificial nose has been made from flesh taken from some portion of a person's body, and this is the relief I will try to obtain."

The case no doubt will attract considerable interest among medical men where the operation will be performed. —St. Paul Post and Press.

To My First Gray Hair.
I look on thee, thou hair of gray,
And sink into a reverie;
For thou proclaim'st nearing day
To final rest—grave certainty!

Al! thou art born of sorrow, true,
And I when thy brothers gather fast,
May I be able to review
Without repentance, all the past.

—M. J. Adams, The Current.

Weather Errors.
Few erroneous notions are spread so readily and cling so tenaciously as those respecting the weather. In noticing common errors of this kind, Prof. Cleveland Abbe, the distinguished meteorologist, urges attention to these facts: That while the moon might well be expected to influence our weather, scientific evidence shows that it does not; that there is no sound reason for believing that sun-spots have any appreciable effect in producing storms, or other local changes; that animal instinct ranks greatly below human intelligence as a guide to future weather; that the indications furnished by plants are due to the hygroscopic condition of the air, as are also other "signs," and are less delicate and reliable than the accurate instrumental tests of meteorologists; that electricity and ozone do not produce the effects often ascribed to them; that thunderstorms do not cool the air, but the cool (inward) results, like the storm, from the rise of hot air—at least in many cases; that it has not yet been proven that the removal of forests and the extension of railroads and telegraphs have influenced our climate; that the weather is materially the same as a old-fashioned times scientific records disproving the family recollections of the oldest inhabitant; and that severe storms are no more liable to occur at the date of the equinoxes, or on certain days of the week or month, than at other times.

Pretty Washington Tricyclists.
Two very stylish-looking Washington young ladies were making a decided sensation on the avenue by their dexterous riding of the tricycle. Both are remarkably pretty and wear handsome street costumes. One of them wears a gentleman's high silk hat, the only difference being that it is turned up on one side and has a little black feather in it. Her cloth dress fits her trim figure exquisitely, and she wears long boots like a backwoodsman. The top of the boot hides her pretty ankle, but the convenience obviates many of the objections raised to ladies riding tricycles. Her companion wears a Tam O'Shanter cap, which falls prettily about her head. They each own a single tricycle, and use these in the morning, but in the evening when the avenue is crowded they ride a double tricycle, and causes many of the congressman's heart to go pit-a-pat in unison with the girls' daintily booted feet on the pedals. —Baltimore American.

A Shrewd Buyer of Coin.
A quiet, sedate young woman, who wears glasses, always carries a couple of books and looks as if she was an admirer of Browning is one of the characters who haunt the New York hotels. She is a shrewd young Jewess, in spite of her Bostonian appearance, and makes a good living by buying the foreign coins, which is picked up at the hotels from travelers who exchange glittering foreign gold for the cartwheel American dollars. The hotels get the coin at a discount, she buys it at a slight advance and disposes of it in Wall street. Her friends say there isn't a coin struck but she can tell its value at a glance. She picks up valuable pieces once in a while that go to numismatists at a handsome premium.—Kansas City Times.

The Minister Acted.
It was announced that the Christmas "Cantata" given at our Methodist church would represent the birth of Christ. Our minister appeared in a frock of white bear skin, his face blackened, an enormous wig of crimson wool on his head, and a large flowing beard of the same. He marched up and down the stage, uttering frequent deep, guttural sounds resembling the noise of some wild beast; then he would crouch down and give a sudden spring at some of the young girls. This we are told, was a representation of the birth of our Savior. —Cor. Christian Advocate.

Commissioner of Deeds for all the States, Mr. G. E. Beardon, Baltimore, Md., writes that he suffered for a long time with rheumatism which yielded to no treatment until he applied St. Jacobs Oil.

Origin of Verdi's Masterpiece.
"Verdi was first induced to undertake the composition of 'Otello' on the occasion of the performance of his 'Massa da Requiem' at the Scala for the benefit of the sufferers by the inundation at Terrara. The next day he gave a dinner to the four principal solo singers, at which were present several friends, among them Signor Facio and Signor Ricordi. The latter laid siege to the maestro, trying to persuade him to undertake a new work. For a long time Verdi resisted, and his wife declared that probably only a Shakespearean subject could induce him to take up his pen again. A few hours later Facio Ricordi went to Boito, who at once agreed to make the third in the generous conspiracy, and two days later sent a complete sketch of the plan for the opera, following strictly the sketch, and from that moment it fell to the part of Giulia Ricordi to urge on the composer and the poet by constant reminders. Every Christmas he sent to Verdi's house an Otello formed of chocolate, which at first very small, grew large as the opera progressed.—Corriere del Malino.

Rich Young Women.
The three richest young women in America are the Misses Drexel of Philadelphia. Their fortunes are not less than $4,000,000 each. They are all young—the oldest 28, the youngest 22. Their home in Philadelphia is a big, plain, four storied brown stone front, and when they are in the country they spend most of their time at their farm house, an old colonial brick mansion sixteen miles out in the country from Philadelphia. Their home is very singularly free from the fancy work and the unutilized brace truck with which women ordinarily love to surround themselves, and the chief amusement of these healthy young American girls is horse-back riding and the grooming and curry-combing of their thoroughbred steeds. These girls have no nonsense about them and are as clear as any women in the world. Hundreds live on their bounty. One supports entirely a home for orphans and they are now building a protactory for boys, where 200 boys are to be generally modeled, in its management, after the Girard College, but will be under the direction of the Catholic church.

Suffering Womanhood.
Too much effort cannot be made to bring to the attention of suffering womanhood the great value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a remedy for the diseases of women. Such an one is the wife of General Barringer, of Winston, N. C., and we quote from the General's letter as follows: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham: Please allow me to add my testimony to the most excellent medicinal qualities of your Vegetable Compound. Mrs. Barringer was treated for several years for what the physician called Leucorrhoea and Prolapsus Uteri combined. I sent her to Richmond, Va., where she remained for six months under the treatment of an eminent Physician without any permanent benefit. She was induced to try your medicine and after a reasonable time commenced to improve and is now able to attend to her business and considers herself FULLY RELIEVED."
