EVERY THURSDAY AT $1.50 A YEAR.

THE Bank of England is the most extensive banking institution in the world. It employs over 1,000 clerks and its buildings cover 8 acres.

It is estimated that discoveries, inventions, and compounds patented each year in the United States and never amounting to anything, cost $3,000,000.

A NEW fashionable beverage has come into use among New York ladies. It is an India drink and is simply a decoction of mint and kummel. The percentage of alcohol in the drink is very small—just enough to make a delightful summer exhilarant for the feminine creation.

The black-list recently published by the Pennsylvania road has caused a great deal of comment all over the country. It contains the names of ministers, judges, legislators, lawyers and state officials who have sold or loaned their names, but not a single newspaper man is found on the list.

The Wisconsin farmers are feeling jubilant over the announcement that George W. Peck, the bad boy fender, is going to run as the democratic candidate for governor. They have been patiently waiting for a chance at the alleged humorist who makes life a burden to the railway traveller. What happened to the Bad Boy's parent will not be a circumstance to the mauling he will get when he runs for office.

The love and respect of a true man is all that makes the pain-filled life of a woman worth living. Wealth may give her garments of beauty, pleasure may lead her into the path of delight, the world may admire her, and fame may crown her with glory, but unless she has the anchor of a strong, manly heart that beats for her alone, the tempestuous voyage of life is not worth taking, so far as happiness is concerned. The sacrifice of self for the good of others and the consciousness of duty well performed alone can sweeten the bitter cup of life to any woman who has missed its best joy—a man's honest love.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

The pastoral limit in the Methodist Episcopal church will hereafter be five instead of three years. This is a change which has been agitated for years. The influences that have been at work to bring this amendment about came largely from ministers and churches that have had to maintain their charges, in rivalry with ministers of other denominations whose pastoral terms have been without limitation or restriction. It may be safely assumed that the church at large will cordially indorse the change. This leaves the maximum term of service five years, where it has hitherto been three years, and the presiding bishops may now as formerly, make changes at the end of every year, if it is for the best interests of the charge, the conference and the preacher.

CORNELL college has established a course of journalism which is intended to make professional newspaper men in the same way as schools turn out full-fledged doctors and lawyers. The experiment will be watched carefully by those colleges which have looked upon the idea as impracticable. Similar propositions have been entertained by Harvard and other American universities, but have always been set aside. There is a gulf between the theoretic and the practical newspaper man which no schooling or set rules will satisfy. The successful journalist is the man who follows a native instinct and who works his way in a newspaper from the bottom up. He adjusts his theory to practical affairs and emergencies, a province altogether subsequent and foreign to the work of a school.

OMAHA is one of the progressive cities of the boundless west. She has 110,000 population, nine national banks, twenty-five miles of paved streets, $15,000,000 in bank deposits, 80,000 children in public schools, sixty-seven churches, the third largest hog packing business in America, and the largest smelting and refining works in America. The city has doubled its population in four years, its wholesale trade in the same time, its brick business in two years, its grocery trade in four years, its hardware trade in two years, its lumber business in three years, its hat and cap business in three years, its dry goods business in two years, its boot and shoe business in three years, its live stock trade in one year and its bank deposits in four years. This is a very good showing and demonstrates that Omaha is one of the coming cities of the nation.

LAND in many parts of the West is so cheap that many farmers have got in the habit of doing too much, that is, trying to cultivate too much land. Don't do it, you can not put in sixty acres of corn with a pony team and do justice to the crop or yourself as a farmer. Sixty acres of corn yielding 25 bushels to the acre means 1,500 bushels and lots of work. Thirty acres, tilled and tended, so as to produce 50 bushels, means 1,500 bushels, less work and untold satisfaction. I always feel sorry for the farmer who has a great big field of corn just coming up of a sickly color beside his neighbor's which is dark green, rank and healthy. I am sorry that he has so little pride that he is willing, it appears, to be so completely outdone by his neighbor. "Do well what you do," should be a motto over every barn door in the country.—Western Resources.
