Official City and County Paper.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

- NATIONAL. For President, BENJAMIN HARRISON, of Indiana. For Vice President, LEVI P. MORTON, of New York. CONGRESSIONAL. For Member of Congress, JAMES LAIRD. STATE. For Governor, JOHN M. THAYER. For Lieutenant Governor, GEORGE D. MEIKLEJOHN. For Secretary of State, GILBERT L. LAW. For State Treasurer, J. E. HILL. For Attorney General, WILLIAM LEESE. For State Auditor, THOMAS H. BENTON. or Superintendent of Public Instruction, GEORGE H. LAW. Commissioner Public Lands and Buildings, JOHN STEEN. SENATORIAL. For Senator, 25th Senatorial District, J. P. LINDSAY. COUNTY. For Representative, JUSTIN A. WILCOX. For County Attorney, R. M. SNAVELY. For Commissioner, 2nd District, C. T. BLACKMAN.

THE stories manufactured by the democrats with intent to injure General Harrison have all been short lived. Others will appear from day to day, but they will wear no better than those that have been exploded. The more respectable democratic papers, like the N. Y. World, have pointed out that the loose jointed campaign he hurts only the party in which it originates.

THE reasons why Mr. Gould wants Mr. Cleveland continued in office are these: The Pacific funding bill inspired by Mr. Cleveland if made a law, will be worth a mint of money to Mr. Gould, and if Mr. Cleveland is re-elected, Mr. Gould's Western Union will continue to do the telegraph business of the government. It is money in his pocket for Mr. Gould to help along Mr. Cleveland.

THERE are over four hundred republican clubs in active operation in Missouri, and the amount of good work that they are accomplishing has never been surpassed in all the history of the state. The democrats may think that Missouri is safe for them under any circumstances, but the truth is that she is just about ready to cast off Bourbonism forever and enter upon a career of sound and substantial progress.

MR. BLAINE spoke at Detroit, Mich. Wednesday night, and the enthusiasm with which he was greeted indicates that the people of Michigan are not wavering in their support of protection. Mr. Blaine's address did not deal with the paramount issue of the campaign, protection, but took up the executive record of President Cleveland. There are a few points in Mr. Cleveland's career as president, which, to say the least, are sadly in need of voluminous explanation.

"THE Young Man in Politics is the title of a little pamphlet that has recently been issued. It is a fruitful subject for thought. The young men of America will soon have the control of the government. The young men who will this fall cast their first vote hold the balance of power to day and can decide the result of the approaching election. And it is gratifying to note that they are thoroughly wide awake, are studying carefully the great questions involved in the struggle and are preparing to vote intelligently.

GEN. S. V. BENET, chief of the ordinance bureau of the war department, has issued a circular to the commandant at arsenals and yards to employ, in future, none but democrats, the order extending to women and children. Gen. Benet throws the responsibility upon Secretary Endicott and Endicott does not deny it. This is the civil service reformed and lifted out of the mire of politics. But election is approaching, the case is desperate and everything must be done which can be done. The circular is to be brought to the attention of congress and an investigation asked for.

FROM the vigorous way the democratic editors are pitching into the emperor of China and calling him hard names, it might be surmised that his serene highness the son of the son, was running for president on a republican ticket or that it is a darling scheme now for the administration to declare war against the pig tailed heathen of eastern Asia. But that isn't it. They are trying to throw dust enough in the air to conceal Mr. Cleveland's awkward situation in the frustration of his attempt to manufacture some ammunition for his election on the Pacific coast out of Chinese crackers.

IT is not absolutely certain that there is a short crop of wheat or that there is in Chicago was simply the result of "Hutch's Humbug." Other articles of produce are jumping up in a very lively way. It is impossible that these could have been acted upon by the Hutchinson conspiracy. The fact is that England has unduly depressed the prices of food products by her control of the markets, and as she has lost or is losing this, there is a rebound from the artificial depression. The consumer has a belief that if prices go up, somebody is to blame, but that a constant fall in prices is in obedience to the natural law of supply and demand. This is natural, perhaps, but ludicrously one-sided.

YES, SIRE!

Washington Critic.

"Daniel," remarked the president, as he laid aside the New York Tribune, with a frown on his brow and a sigh in his bosom.

"Yes, sire," responded Daniel, softly. "Do you think I am hated and reviled with a bitterness of partisan malignity by the hosts of Error, but am still loved by the enemies I have made and am making?"

"Yes, sire."

"Do you think I am an unselfish American statesman, Daniel?"

"Yes, sire."

"And, Daniel, do you think I will stand out against the horizon of the history of the age one of the noblest figures in the life of the republic?"

"Yes, sire," replied Daniel, with just a suggestion of a smile as his eye roamed around the physical amplitude of his chief.

"And, Daniel, do you think I am an honest man, who stands for the right with the firmness and serenity of the Rock of Ages itself?"

"Yes, sire."

"And do you think, Daniel, that I am a man of indomitable perseverance, absolute fearlessness and conscious power?"

"Yes, sire."

"And that I have a great brain, intrepid heart and tireless vigor?"

"Yes, sire."

The president was silent a moment, then he arose.

"Daniel," he said, taking him by the hand, as the joyful tears filled his eyes. "I thank you. That's what Don Dickson said about me in his speech at Detroit, but, Daniel, it sounded too good to be true," and the president, overcome by his emotion, threw his arms around Daniel's neck and hid his blushing face in the flowing collar of his office coat.

THE devilish glee with which Dana, of the New York Sun, is knitting Cleveland is hugely enjoyed by republican while it tortures and rocks the democratic press. Dana professes the most ardent friendship for Cleveland, but in the same breath insists that the president call off his mugwump friends who are antagonizing Hill. The situation in New York is decidedly critical. There is danger of open rupture between Hill and Cleveland. The president is between two fires, and whichever way he turns he courts defeat in his own state. In the meantime the editor of the Sun has impaled the democratic candidate for president and is pouring poison into every wound he makes.

It should be distinctly understood by all parties that Governor Hill is not asking President Cleveland to write a letter. The Governor does not want a letter. He is not in any need of a letter. All our alarm is for the safety of the National Democracy, for the safety of the National ticket. We say earnestly and emphatically that they are in danger but Governor Hill is not in danger. It is a very moderate calculation that in the State of New York, under any condition of circumstances that can now be brought about, he will have in the coming election twenty thousand votes more than President Cleveland, with all the Mugwumps.

The little twist to the lion's tail which Cleveland gave by his retaliatory policy would have tickled the Irish Americans to death if it had made the lion howl. But as those who do the chief howling for the lion the London papers, spoke of it as a justifiable electioneer device which must be taken by Englishmen in its true sense, the Irish Americans are less conciliated than ever. If the utterances of Patrick Ford voiced the opinions of all his countrymen, Cleveland would not obtain a single Irish vote.

AFTER all congress managed to sandwich a piece of good legislation between its tariff bills. The house has just passed the senate bill protecting the claims of those settlers who in Kansas and other states were forced to abandon their homesteads on the public domain by reason of drought in order to secure support for themselves. This is a law both humane and beneficial and will restore to thousands of settlers the lands to which they are justly entitled.

ASIDE from mere personal or party considerations, Mr. Morton's letter commends itself to every lover of American institutions by its liberal and patriotic sentiments. "It is," he says, "for the American people to develop and cultivate the continent to which, in the providence of God, they have fallen heirs." What American does not heartily applaud this sentiment as against the English sentiment of Thurman, Mills, Carlisle & Co?

SECRETARY ENDICOTT, the apple of the eye of Massachusetts mugwumps, has out Herodotus as a pernicious partisan. What can his admirers say in his order to remove the women and children employed in armories, who have nothing to do with politics, in order to make places for democrats? This is military service reform.

AND this, by the Chattanooga News, of a woman who bears the south no malice: "Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' is dying from softening of the brain. We never met her, but judging from her detestable volume we can be convinced that Mrs. Stowe ever had any brain to solten."

AS a result of the fictitious value given to wheat by the Hutchinson deal in Chicago, flour has gone up with indignant way. It is doubtful whether an advance in flour can be maintained unless there is a combination among the millers.

AT Utica, New York, a republican association is composed of 400 union veterans. Eighty of these 400 voted the democratic ticket, in 1884. They will vote for Harrison, this year. The call for the meeting was signed by 130 former democrats.
