THE WIFE PLEADS ENTIRE INNOCENCE.

Hannastine's Wife Says She Had No Hand in the Murder of Roten and Ashley. A Broken Bow special to the Omaha Bee says: Last night Sheriff Penney brought Hannastine and wife to Anselby, where the murderer was left in charge of the deputy. The wife and her father came to Broken Bow. An excited crowd followed the woman and her father as far as the hotel. Later Hannastine was brought to town in a carriage, and waiting examination, he was held for trial, and was secreted by the sheriff.

The wife was examined before Judge Leese, and plead not guilty to the charge of being an accessory after the fact, to the murder of Roten and Ashley. Taking the stand, she testified that on the day of the murder she was getting dinner, when Roten and Ashley drove up and fastened their horses to Hannastine's wagon, and then came into the house. Hannastine and wife invited them to take dinner, which they declined. Hannastine gave to one of the men the clock, afterwards found in the dead man's pocket. Then the visitors went out, and Hannastine and wife went down to dinner. After eating, Hannastine arose and went out, closing the door, and his wife washed the dishes. She heard two shots, but did not look out, as her husband often practiced about the place. After fifteen or thirty minutes he came in, saying: "I've done a bad deed," and "we must get out of here." Witness did not see the bodies, but was told that they were under the pile of hay. He wished her to stay there, but she would not, and the two dead men lay around. Taking bedding and a few things, and a roll of butter, the couple started, with their horses hitched to the buggy of the deceased, and leading the horses of the dead man. At a watch he had taken from one body, and it was 3 o'clock. That was the first witness knew of the robbery of the dead. Hannastine left the lead horses at a vacant stable and drove to Anselby. There he met a man of the name of Arnold. At Anselby they changed horses and drove down the next day, traveling all night and all the next day. They avoided towns and slept near haystacks. Near Madison Hannastine hired out to husk corn and worked several days. At Madison he sold the team and buggy for $75 and sent the wife to Columbus by train. He came on another train, as witness says, "thinking maybe" would be cheaper going separate.

Hannastine will look wide and foolish coming out here, but he is not a fool. The feeling in Roten valley and vicinity is terribly bitter and threats of lynching are frequent. But the better feeling will no doubt prevail and the prisoner be given a fair trial.

SEIZURE OF THE HAYTIAN REPUBLIC. Minister Preston Thinks It Would be an Entirely Legal Transaction. New York special: The unexpected arrival at this port of the United States steel cruiser Boston, Capt. Francis M. Ramsey, caused no little surprise in shipping and other circles, as it was generally understood at the time that the cruiser was anchored in the harbor of Port-au-Prince, Hayti, looking after the interests of American citizens, their lives and property. The Boston had been dispatched to Port-au-Prince by the navy department to investigate the seizures of the American steamer Haytian Republic and the schooner William Jones. Upon her arrival in Port-au-Prince, Captain Ramsey learned that the schooner and the payment of an indemnity of $10,000 to her captain by the Haytian government. The Haytian Republic, however, was condemned by the prize court and taken charge of by the Haytian authorities. The Boston's arrival at this port, however, demands the Boston's continual presence there. Captain Compton, of the Haytian Republic, was ordered by the Haytian authorities to leave his ship with his officers and crew, but the galleon Yacht Skirmisher will be left at Port-au-Prince to fly the stars and stripes from the flag-staff of his steamer. When the Boston sailed from Port-au-Prince, on November 16, the American captain, officers and crew of the American steamer Haytian Republic were prisoners of war and their vessel was confiscated, as they claim, unjustly. The ship, crew and galleon captain were by the Boston's departure left completely at the mercy of their captors. No other man-of-war of any nation save Hayti was in port.

If the utterances of Hayti's minister to this country be accepted as indicative of the temper of his countrymen, it may be fairly surmised that the American sailors will fare badly at the hands of their captors. Minister Preston was seen to-day. He said: "So the Boston has returned. It was reported in the papers at the time the Boston was ordered to Port-au-Prince that she would bombard the town, but you see there was nothing in that at all. Do you think the seizure of the Haytian Republic a legal transaction? Certainly I do. The commander of the ship had no right or authority to carry troops which were hostile to the regular government established and only recognized government, even as passengers from one blockaded port to another."

"Have you read, Mr. Minister, that Captain Compton refuses to leave his ship and that the steamer flies the American flag?" was asked. "Yes, I have," was the prompt reply. "And my government ought to haul down that flag on board of the Haytian Republic. Yes, it ought to."

This remark about the flag is likely to cause Haytian trouble, say politicians here.

A Frightful Explosion. Pittsburg dispatch: "Dock" Haggerty was unloading glycerine at Pleasantville, Shenango county, at noon to-day. He had 1,940 pounds in his wagon. It exploded by some means, and Haggerty was killed by the explosion. Part of his two horses were found in the neighboring trees. A piece of the wagon was found half a mile away. Mrs. Gutschaw, in a house in the vicinity, was seriously injured by a side of it being blown in by the explosion. The explosion was heard at Oil City, twelve miles distant.

The Bridegroom Never Came. Norwalk dispatch: Edward H. Hopper of Easton, and Miss Carrie E. Brady of Lyons Plains, were to have been married Monday evening at the residence of the bride's parents. While preparations were being made for the event the groom's father drove to the Brady residence and informed the head of the house that the ceremony would have to be postponed, as the son had disappeared on the day previous and could not be found. The news was a terrible shock to Miss Brady, for a time she was prostrated with grief. On the day of his disappearance young Hopper appeared to be in good spirits, and gave directions regarding the place where he was to take his bride. The woods were thoroughly searched, but the bridegroom was dragged, but all to no purpose.

A BLIZZARD ON THE ATLANTIC COAST.

Daring Men Who Went to the Rescue of Perishing Seamen. The terrible effect of last night's storm, says a Boston dispatch, have been everywhere manifest along the coast to-day. Although the loss of life already reported is large, it would have been still greater but for the brave efforts of Capt. Joshua James and his volunteer life-saving crew of Hull, who are credited with saving twenty-eight persons from disabled vessels.

On Saturday afternoon a large three-masted vessel was driven on the beach at Hull. Capt. James and his men rushed for the Hunt gun, breeches-buoy and life boat of the Massachusetts humane society at Stony Beach, and after strenuous efforts they succeeded in bringing ashore the crew which consisted of a large schooner which proved to be the Cox and Green, from Philadelphia for Chelsea with coal. The vessel is now fast breaking up.

Hardly had the band of rescuers completed their work at this place when another vessel was driven on the beach at Hull. Capt.
