ARBOR DAY IN NEBRASKA. APRIL 22, 1889.

TO THE OFFICERS, TEACHERS, PATRONS AND PUPILS OF THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS OF NEB.: The States of Nebraska designate the 22d day of April as Arbor Day. I desire to call the attention of all teachers and school authorities in the state to the importance of this day. Let this day be an occasion of interest and benefit to all our people and especially to the school children of the state. Let each school district do something to make more attractive and comfortable the many thousand school grounds in the state which now have neither trees nor shrubs, for use or ornament. I hope all will take an interest in this day by setting out trees and shrubs about the school grounds dedicating them to authors, educators, statesmen, generals, historians, or poets, or to people or children closely identified with the schools.

The planting of the trees may very properly be supplemented by literary exercises, out of doors when weather permits, and in the school-house where out-door exercises are not advisable. These exercises may include the singing of appropriate songs, the reading or recital of prose or poetical selections relating to this subject, a short address by some suitable person, essays, letters, etc.

Arbor Day should be made one of the most interesting and profitable days of the year. If properly observed in a few years every rural school in Nebraska can have its pleasant shady bowers where the pupils can find shelter from the scorching sun of summer and where their taste for the beauty of nature will find some gratification.

On this subject, B. F. Northrop writes: "This work naturally extends from the school to the home, leading children to share in doorway adornments, and in planting trees by the wayside. Under this new stimulus of Arbor Day, just adopted in so many states, more trees should be set out by the roadside of America, this spring than any former year. Nothing can add so much to the beauty of our roads as long avenues of fine trees. One sees this illustrated for hundreds of miles on a stretch in some countries in Europe. Growing on land otherwise running to waste, such trees yield most satisfactory returns. The shade and beauty are grateful to every traveler, and doubly so to the planter, for there is a peculiar pleasure in the perpetuation of trees, whether forest, fruit or ornamental. Trees and tree-planting from a fit subject for the oral lessons now demanded in our best schools. Pupils should thus be led to observe trees and learn their habits, for then they will appreciate them as the grandest products of nature. One of the educational forces of Arbor Day begins when children are prompted to plant, not only trees, but seeds, acorns, ash, elm, or maple keys, nuts, drupe, stones or pits, and then year by year to observe the wonderful miracles, with tree-life they have started working out before them. What interest and profit, what growth of mind and heart they will gain as they watch the mysterious forces of these living germs; their marvelous assimilating power, carrying on such a curious chemistry in their underground laboratory conjoined with the upper story apparatus of foliage, secreting acids, that dissolve sand and stones, transforming masses, earth and even flint into living forms of beauty and fragrance! It is something for a child to drop such a germ in the earth, and think of its possibilities. Thus the influence of Arbor Day will manifest themselves more and more as the years go by especially to those who early follow Dr. Holmes' advice, and "make trees monuments to their fathers and mothers."

I invite a report from each and every school observing this day, giving the general character of the exercises, the number and kind of trees planted. This report should be sent to me at an early day by the person in charge of the exercises. I desire to make mention of these exercises in my next report. LINCOLN, Neb., April 3, 1889. GEO. B. LANE, State Supt. Public Instruction.

ECONOMIC questions alone are involved in the outlined policy of President Harrison with reference to the South. If present progress continues in the direction of material development the race question will take care of itself, precisely as it does in the North. The best way to wipe out an old selfishness, and the prejudices which belong to it, is to supply a new one. The Louisville Courier-Journal, makes light of the matter, but may change its tone after the congressional elections of 1890. This will test the new departure, which is far more sensible and more promising for good results, than the present policy on the part of the South, who must be changed industrially before they change politically.

The legislatures of Indiana and New Jersey are fair samples of the rule and ruin methods of democracy in power. In both states the energy of the party was concentrated in a wholesale grab on the treasuries. Every law which interfered with the reign of plunder in New Jersey was repealed, and the distribution of spoils placed in the hands of the governor to prevent the possibility of a future republican legislature disturbing their grip on the public crib. In Indiana a republican governor nullified the schemes of the democrats, but their scandalous management of state finances proved them to be totally unfit to control or direct public affairs.

The department of public instruction of Iowa has issued its customary annual Arbor day leaflet in a novel and attractive form. As Arbor day in Iowa is first held, carries with it the evidences of popular desire. It is a timely demand and springs from the very patriotic feeling that with millions of surplus in the treasury, we ought to have a fleet on every sea which would fittingly represent the power and dignity of a great nation, and enforce respect for its flag. Congress will not be slow to act in view of the public sentiment on the matter. The surplus could not be spent in a more profitable manner than in the building of a navy which would rival a second-class power at least.

TROUBLE is again brewing on the Des Moines river lands. The attempt to evict the settlers is useless. They peacefully move out of their homes when ordered and return when the officers disappear. They are thoroughly organized and determined to hold the lands and raise a crop this year, expecting that the next congress will give them relief, either by compensating them for time and improvements, or confirm their title.
