

GANSCHOW,

THE OLD RELIABLE

BOOT & SHOE MAN,

Either wants to make a fair profit or tell the reason why. All business centers around profit. It is the life of trade, the ambition of all, the object of your work and ours. But profit has more sides than mere percentage. To us a good reputation is a distinct profit, and thus square dealing enters into every transaction. We have, however, an assortment of odds and ends

bled to sell

PROFIT.

These are for first class, substantial goods, well worth one-half more than we are asking for them. We have an unusually large and attractive line of which would be "the thing" for a present to your husband, your brother or someone else's brother. We are making very attractive figures on these goods, also.

THE LOUISIANA LOTTERY DRAWING

Is not of as much importance to the people of McCook as is the fact that we are prepared to save them Dollars on Merchandise. No matter how low other merchants SAY they will sell, we have the goods and prices which will prove to any qualified judge that we can out-sell them every time Money Talks! Your money and our goods make a lively dialogue

In addition to our excellent goods and low prices, we offer some special inducements in All Wool Dress Goods, just received, Flannels, Cotton Flannels, German Knitting Yarns, Saxony, Hosiery, and everything in Dry Goods, Clothing, Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, Gloves and Mittens away below the usual price. We are here to stay and will save you 20 to 30 per cent. on all bills you buy of us.

FASHION LETTER.

A Chatty Article on Things of Interest to Ladies.

What Dame Fashion Decees Are Popular Now—Astrakhan Now in Vogue—Cloaks and Wraps—Street Costumes—Minor Notes.

[Special New York Correspondence.]

Astrakhan is beyond doubt the fashionable fur this season. None of the woolly-woven imitations of two seasons ago, but the genuine article, or something so near it that it is difficult to distinguish from real.

TAILOR GOWN.

garment of the season. Muffs are of a medium size and are made of two kinds of fur, or astrakhan, with heavy ribbon bows, and a black, long-tailed bird perched coquettishly among the loops.

Carriage wraps and evening cloaks are the only fur-lined garments now shown. Carriage wraps are made of camel's hair, brocade or cloth, and lined with dark fur—while evening cloaks are in the form of Russian circulars, with lining and great collar of white Mandarin lamb-skin.

Faced cloth and fine soft diagonals are still the favorite materials for street wear, and in many instances they have been worn for afternoon receptions, and considered much more distingue than a pretentious silk costume.

A long Princesse polonaise is trimmed with fur and a little heavy, rich, dull-shaded applique hand embroidery, the skirt lifted at the extreme side to show an underskirt of cloth or velvet to match or harmonize with the embroidery. A short, high-collared cape is added for the street. See fur collarette illustration.

Among the many dressy mantles to be seen I will describe one made to match the costume. A new shade of dahlia velvet is the material. The fronts are close to the figure and trimmed with silver and dahlia passementerie and narrow sable edging. Square Hungarian sleeves hang to the hem of the gown, with tight coat-sleeves under. The back forms fit closely at the waist, then widen out into flat Directoire panels opening up the middle.

Large plaids are still in style, not the fancy plaids of past seasons, but the genuine Scotch clan plaids, both in silk and heavy woolsens. The large patterns are easily managed for the waist by using a little taste and ingenuity in arranging the principal lines to draw them in at the waist. The new galleons are too complicated and elaborate to describe. It suffices to say that any well-stocked passementerie department of our shops can furnish you with every conceivable variety, from a cotton band with a few threads of silk and tinsel, to hand-work of exquisite texture, color and variety as high as twenty-five dollars and fifty dollars a yard. What more can we want? But before the season is over I do not doubt we shall have a still newer and more complete embarrassment of riches.

Long-shaped toques and turbans are the prevailing shapes for young people, unless I except the broad-brimmed hats of great beauty, but alas! trying to many of us. The long, low hats with narrow velvet strings coming from the extreme back is universally becoming and is adaptable for all occasions. Black, with a touch of old pink, or the new French lilac are worn with street gowns, and delicate feather bands, embroidery and velvet flowers are wrought together into an irresistible love of a theater or reception bonnet. Long, narrow, flower wreaths, with an aigrette and a few velvets (preferably black) loops and strings is the most elegant thing for dressy occasions.

Kid is the foundation for many new garnitures, both for millinery and dress trimmings. Some of the imported patterns show old Spanish and Venetian designs reproduced with wonderful skill. Vandyke patterns and arabesques are wrought in cream, tan and brown kid, with gold threads and fine bead-work lightening up the design.

Thin, gauzy materials are still the most popular fabrics for dancing and reception gowns for young ladies. Mouseline de sole, pineapple and crepe lisse have deep borderings of exquisite embroideries, beading and spangling of fabulous value, and there are also beautiful simple designs that can be bought for one dollar and a half a yard. At this price what could be prettier for a young girl than a cream mouseline de sole, wide enough to make the entire skirt-length, with graduated satine bands, beginning about two inches wide and narrowing up to about an eighth of an inch, the remainder of the skirt dotted with small squares? This over a silk slip and a fichu waist is simple but very elegant.

The tailor-made costume illustrated here is of nut-brown Vienna with velvet and military braid trimmings. Gold buttons are again in vogue for cloth gowns braided or embroidered with gold; but buttons have not yet returned to prominence except on Directoire costumes, and even they are rather passe.

WALKING HAT.

The change is bound to come very soon and we shall have our gowns "all buttoned down before."

Some distinct nationality is adopted in our fashion each year. Greek last year, Russian the year before and this season Spanish seems to be the fashionable favorite. Figaro jackets are the newest thing for house dresses. Bolero or Toreador hat shapes are worn with street costumes and the Spanish pompons of feathers are a characteristic feature of the season's millinery. To wear with plaid gowns are black Spanish turbans of velvet and felt trimmed with three ribbon rosettes, each of a shade in the plaid. We come as near as possible to the Spanish mantilla in the new flat black lace bonnets with no crown, but a comb or coronet of jet showing the hair. Lace strings and one red or pink rose over the left ear gives a very Spanish effect.

LOYALTY.

How the Armies of the Nation Were Filled—Colonel Mussey's Views.

"Whoever says that there was nothing but sentiment back of the impulse which filled our armies with brave soldiers knows but little of human nature," said Colonel Fred Mussey, in reply to an assertion that sentiment, not patriotism, filled our armies.

"I was only sixteen years old," he continued, "and was anxious to go with the soldiers. That was not patriotism, of course; but there was love of country beneath the love of adventure. My parents would not consent to my enlistment, for I was the only healthy and helpful boy in the family. But one morning about two o'clock I was aroused from a deep slumber to find my aged father and mother standing by the side of my bed. My father said:

"Freddie, my son, we have concluded to give you up to your country. Your mother and I have been talking and praying all night and we feel that it is our duty to our country and therefore our duty to our God to give you up. You may enlist to-morrow morning."

"Then they kissed me and went weeping away. The next morning my father accompanied me to the recruiting station and gave his consent to my enlistment. There was an example of the deepest and most sincere patriotism. It was the combination of New England religious devotion and love of country. There were tens of thousands of fathers and mothers all over the land talking and praying night and day in just the same manner. The armies were filled by the patriotic sense of loyalty, and those fathers and mothers as well as those boys of '61 must not be called sentimental in my presence without calling forth a strong and stern denial."

Getting Even.
First Dude—No wonder I am pale, Clarence. Fweddyy played a mean trick on me.

Second Dude—What was it, old fel?
"Why, I gave him a cigar, y' know, and the cruel fellow made me stay in the room while he smoked it, bah Jovel!"

An Ignorant Musician.
Maddox—Fangle, what do you think of Beeflat as a musician?
Fangle—Beeflat, sir, does not know enough about music to beat a mud-drum.
