We have a wolf chase every day on the common east of town. The sport is just about as hard on the dogs as on the wolf.

The business of teaching the young idea how to shoot is running along very nicely at the commodious brick in the west part of town.

The editor of the Bartley Long-Felt-Want was sedately moving along our yellow ocre boulevards, last Saturday. Much exposure on the farm in assiduous search for hayseed has tanned his once beautiful pink complexion into a deep bronze. The fact is that there is such a radical change in his appearance that the pulpit orators of Bartley know him not.

What does the T.-D. man mean in his New Year greeting where he says, "Let us while seated in our comfortable homes, with our families gathered about us, think of those * * * who are in need." Charlie is known in the capital of Red Willow county as a single man. Sometimes in the course of human events a married man tries to impose upon a credulous public to the extent of passing as a single gentleman; but for Charlie to deliberately class himself with those who are more or less bound in the holy bonds of wedlock is enough to cause one to pause and ask himself, "Do I see or do I dream?" No, Charlie, you can't fool the dear people. Your high and extensive brow is not so heavily draped with care as the married man's. The buttons on your Sunday clothes are all right. Your complexion indicates healthy digestive organs. You are never seen at the drug store buying soothing syrup or paregoric. Your incomings and outgoings are all in time. You have never been seen hurrying through the alleys at the midnight hour and no sleepy doctor has ever called out to you, "Hello, Barnes, is that you? I'll be there in a minute." Oh, no, you are not married nor a man of a family, and it is our sad-eyed duty to inform you that the chances are about even that you ever will be.

BETWEEN twenty and thirty thousand pensioners died last year. Complaints concerning the money paid old soldiers will grow less and less as the years roll on, and not many years hence the people will be proud of what the government has done for her defenders.
