

OVERHEARD WHISPERS.

CERTAIN number of days ago my attention was directed toward a young man of not altogether prepossessing appearance who appeared to be waiting nearly opposite to my window for the coming of some other person. His countenance was expressive of vacant insipidity, his gait irregular and his manner confused. His dress was nondescript very effective, no doubt but quite inappropriate either to business occupation or to the pursuit of legitimate pleasure.

tain that Ethel and my heroine were the same person. "She will leave for the country tomorrow. I hope the change will do her good. Her aunt has promised to take charge of her for a few weeks." I felt that I must speak then. It occurred to me that if I had a daughter who had formed a secret attachment to a man like the one I had seen last night I should look upon the information as an act of great kindness. I might be wrong. I must use great caution, then there could be no harm resulting from word of mine.

world, and when you find one she will tell you that it is almost impossible for her to get an evening to herself, because so many dear, kind friends are apt to drop in on an evening. And she will add: "I'm glad it's so, for I should not be able to get through the day without the prospect of these pleasant evenings. I wish the days might be all evenings with a time-table that never crept beyond the limits of 8 to 11 p. m."
