HIS SNAKE RECORD.

A Georgian Who Does Not Wish to Pose as Munchausen.

There is a citizen of Valdosta who has had some startling experiences with poisonous snakes during his life. He is entirely responsible, does not like notoriety and seldom talks of his adventures with reptiles, because he fears his recital of them would not be believed, and he does not care to figure as a Munchausen among snake story tellers.

Some time ago he was attracted by the laughing of a child who was at play in the front yard. Looking through the window he discovered to his horror that the child was playing with a great live rattlesnake, which sprang its warning rattle just as the child was rescued from what would have been certain death.

At another time recently, while wading in a branch, he stepped on a large water moccasin, and narrowly escaped being bitten, as he had crushed the body of the reptile and aroused its wrath. It did show fight, however, chasing him to dry land.

"On still another occasion," says this hero of many battles with snakes, "I had cause to tramp all day with companions in a swamp, and it was during snake time of the year. During that day I had the misfortune to step on as many as three live and wriggling moccasins at different times, but had the good luck, as usual to get off without having their poisonous fangs struck into my flesh. No other one of the party had such close calls. It all fell to my lot.

At another time, while I was pushing my way through a thick and boggy swamp, one of my feet broke through the moss-coevred mud, and it threw me forward. I caught at a tussock just by me, and threw my hand on a large moccasin. It flinched, but did not move. I was stuck in the mud. Its forked tongue flashed in my face! I could not get up without a struggle, and I was airaid to make the effort, A. New Meteorological Records. In January of last year the systematic observation of snow was commenced in Russia at 428 stations in the European portions of the empire, at twenty-one in the Asiatic and at fiftyfive in the Caucasus. At first the record simply stated daily whether the ground was covered or not, but last winter the inquiry was extended to the depth and general behavior of the snow. In a report from European-Russia for the early months of 1890, Herr Berg has mapped the southern and western limits of the continuous snow-covering for the 1st and 15th of January, February, March and April. In the west, the snow extended steadily until the beginning of March, the limit then being close to the Baltic; in the southeast there was steady advance until February, and as far as the coast of the Caspian; in the south the advance was fluctuating, there being a maximum in the middle of January, and the middle of February, both reaching to the Black Sea coast. The retirement of the snow-limit began in the south and southeast in the middle of February; in the west about half a month later, On April 15 the limit passed through Onega on the White sea, Wetluga, and Kathreinenburg.

By the 1st of May, all European-Russia was free from snow.

For Prize Vegetables Try Electricity. Astonishing results in electric culture have been reported by a Russian agriculturist, M. Spechneff. He planted seeds, such as peas, beans, rye, etc., through which a current was passed for two minutes, this electrification being repeated ten times, and found that most of the plants were developed with about double the usual rapidity. He then tried electrifying the earth. Plates of zing and copper 28 inches high and 18 inchew wide, were sunk deep into the ground at the extremities of flat iron bars, and connected above the surface with an iron wire. The effect upon plant growth was prodigious. A radish reached a length of over 17 inches and a diameter of 51 inches, and a carrot grew to 101 inches in diameter and 61 pounds in weight--both vegetables being of good quality. The total crop was four times the ordinary for roots and two or three times for plants.

An Example of Hail-Making. The interesting phenomenon of hail in the actual process of formation has others, enclosed a court, when he saw back and up in thick drops, and tossed them in all directions, transforming them into balls of ice. This formation of hail ceased when the south wind ceased, but was repeated three or four times in ten minutes.

A New Thing in Advertising. The General Passenger Agent of the New York Central has contracted with Pratt & Letchworth of Buffalo for the manufacture of a large number of toy railway trains; cars to be made of pressed steel, locomotives of malleable iron, and to be facsimiles of the passenger e julpment of the New York Central with the name of the road on each car and locomotive, the whole train to be forty five inches long. Mr. Daniels' idea is, that if you impress upon the minds of the chil dren the superior facilities offered by "America's Greatest Railroad," they wil not forget it when they grow older, and will patronize the New York Central when they make their wedding tours. The private com-partment cars of the Central's "Chicago Limited" give each couple a perfect boudoir. and so popular are they that it is said there is scarcely a day in the year that this train does not carry one or more bridar parties.
