THE RED WILLOW COUNTY CASE.

The supreme court of Nebraska, yesterday, handed down an opinion in the case of the state ex rel. Wilcox vs. Crabtree, allowing a writ of mandamus compelling the board of Red Willow county to call a special election for the relocation of the county seat. Mr. Justice Norval wrote the opinion, the syllabus being as follows:

The report of a referee on a question of fact has the same effect as the verdict of a jury and will not be set aside as being against the weight of evidence unless it is clearly wrong.

1. A petition was presented to the board of county commissioners of Red Willow county purporting to be signed by 1,331 resident electors of the county requesting said board to call a special election for the relocation of the county seat, which petition contained a statement of all the matters required to be set out therein, by section 1, article 3, chapter 17, compiled statutes. Subsequently during the pendency of said petition a remonstrance was filed with said board against the calling of an election and also filed a petition signed by 285 of the persons who had previously signed the petition requesting that their names be stricken therefrom. After deducting all who were disqualified petitioners and those who had withdrawn their names the petition was signed by 1,046 resident electors of said county, which exceeded in number three-fifths of all the votes cast in said county at the preceding general election. The county board denied the petition. Held that the duty to call the election being enjoined by law, the mandamus will lie to enforce the performance of the same.

2. The relator is entitled to costs against the county.

Persons who have failed in the attempt, claim that it is impossible to find an empty house in town that is tenable.

A woman wanted at the Chinese laundry to do washing and ironing. Will pay one dollar a day.
