Said McKeighan in his acceptance speech at Holdrege: "I mean no disrespect to the defenseless dead when I tell you that I am no democrat."

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster Says:

The republican party is the party of action; its breath is progress; its speech is the language of the world; its dialect the rhetoric of the home and the farm and the shop; its shibboleths might be written on the white walls of any church. It holds within its ranks the armies of all reforms. It studies political conditions, weighs popular sentiment, and seizes the earliest hour to crystallize that sentiment into wise legislation.

Its heroic constituencies are the thinking, moving, vital elements of American life.

Is it any wonder that women support such a party?

THE Navy department at Washington has received advices from Lieutenant Peary that the "stars and stripes" have been planted farther north on the eastern coast of Greenland than any standard of civilization has ever before reached. The glacial conquests of the HARRISON administration will always illuminate a bright page in American history.

THE Mugwump organs have an unpleasant job on hand in attempting to refute the showing made by Commissioner of Labor Peck in his report on "the effect of the tariff on labor and wages" in the State of New York. The general conclusion arrived at by the Mugwump is, that since it has been shown by investigation that wages have increased, that production has increased and that strikes have lessened in New York since the McKinley law was passed, the tariff has had nothing to do with it. That is a beautiful, symmetrical and complete Mugwump argument and leaves nothing more to be said. It is considered fair that the readers of this paper should have the benefit of the argument in order the better to judge the kind of people that make it.

THERE is not a thoughtful business man in the country who does not know that the enactment into law of the declaration of the Chicago convention on the subject of the tariff would at once plunge the country into a business convulsion such as it has never seen; and there is not a thoughtful workingman who does not know that it would at once enormously reduce the amount of work to be done in this country by the increase of importations that would follow, and necessitate a reduction of his wages to the European standard. If any one suggests that this radical policy will not be executed if the democratic party attains power, what shall be thought of a party that is capable of trifling with great interests?—President Harrison's letter of acceptance.

WHEN the tariff prevaricators begin their talk about the increase in the cost of living under the McKinley bill it is a good plan to draw the report of the senate investigating committee on them. The document was signed by Senator Carlisle, as well as the republican members, and shows the following facts:

First—The cost of articles entering into the use of those earning less than $1,000 per annum has decreased up to May, 1892, 3.4 per cent, while in farm products there has been an increase in prices, owing in part to increased foreign demand and the opening of new markets. In England during the same period the cost of living increased 1.9 per cent. Tested by the power to purchase articles of necessity, the earnings of our working people have never been as great as they are now.

Second—There has been an average advance in the rate of wages of .55 of 1 per cent.

Third—There has been an advance in the price of all farm products of 18.67 per cent and of all cereals 33.59 per cent.

THERE are several important railroad cases on the docket of the United States court for adjudication at the next term. The juries have not yet been empaneled. It has been suggested that the grand jury meet and call every petit jury up to answer whether or not he rode to Omaha on a railroad pass. His testimony on this interesting point might be reinforced by the testimony of general ticket agents of the various lines of Nebraska whose records ought to show the name of every juror holding a pass. Any juror, grand or petit, in any court, who holds annual pass or has accepted a trip pass should be discharged. The subject should be made a test of a juror's qualifications.—Bee.

THE Vermont election indicates to the New York Sun "the impossibility of shaking Republican states from their allegiance to the economic system under which they have prospered."

IT has been decided in a court of justice in Texas that a woman who defended the honor of her name by killing the man who wantonly slandered her was insane. It is quite doubtful whether the public will concur in the wisdom of that verdict. The woman may have been impetuous, but she showed a great deal of rational human nature in the accomplishment of her revenge.

THE Chicago Herald greets the coming of the Democratic committee's Western branch to that city with an analysis of the rainbow in Wisconsin which, coming from a Democratic newspaper, is nothing less than barbarous cruelty. The Herald points out that Peck, democratic governor of Wisconsin, though he had over 28,000 plurality over his Republican opponent, yet had a total vote of only 160,338, while Harrison in 1888 received for President 176,553 votes. The total vote in the election in which Peck was chosen was almost 40,000 short of a presidential year vote. Peck received 7,000 more votes than did the Democratic electoral ticket in 1888. The colors in this rainbow glitter much more attractively from New York than they do upon closer inspection.

DEMOCRATS are fond of asserting that all comparisons of wages between American and England are unfair since England cannot be an agriculture nation, is isolated, etc., and must take up manufacturing. In their reasons lies the strongest argument for wage comparison. England must be a manufacturing nation, it is the great manufacturing nation of the world because its workmen have nothing else to engage in and this necessity makes their wages very low, thus enabling them to produce wares at a very low cost and a great profit to the employer. America will not pay such wages and by our tariff we keep out England's products. The laboring man of America has all the advantage in every fair comparison and he knows it.

QUININE AND PE-RU-NA.

Two Great Malarial Remedies Compared.

Nothing is more clearly demonstrated than that there are two distinct forms of malaria, which, for want of better names, may be denominated acute and chronic forms. It has been recently shown that the parasite which causes malaria are different in the acute and chronic forms. The acute form is commonly known as fever and ague, or chills and fever. This form of the disease is too well known in malarious districts to need description, and is generally curable by large doses of quinine, though this is not so favorable a remedy as Pe-ru-na. The chronic form of malaria is, by no means, so well understood, as the symptoms are hardly ever exactly alike in any two cases, and it is rarely, if ever, curable by taking quinine. Each case presents slightly different symptoms, the most common ones being dull headache, sallow complexion, furred tongue, bad taste, poor digestion, shivering feelings, hot flashes, cold hands and feet, and constant, tired feelings.

Quinine will not cure cases of chronic malaria as above described. Pe-ru-na is the only specific for such cases. Pe-ru-na is sure to cure, leaves the system with no derangement, and produces no drug habit hard to leave off, which quinine will do.

Pe-ru-na is for sale at most drug-stores, accompanied with directions for use; but those who are using it should send for the Family Physician No. 1, a treatise on malaria. Sent free by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing Company, Columbus, Ohio.
