OUTING SHOES.

It long ago seemed as though shoes could never be better and never be cheaper, but they are better now and cheaper now than they ever were before. The great every day favorite is our men's and ladies' shoe. It is as much a boon to the pocketbook as it is to the feet. It won't wear you out to wear it out. You don't need to take care of it; it takes care of itself. It will give you solid comfort for the simple reason that a better shoe for knockabout purposes has never been produced. If prices never appealed to you before, the price of this shoe will, for it costs only $2.50. It will look nicer and wear longer than any shoe on earth.

Literary Note.

The February number of Romance opens the third year of this magazine of complete stories, which has been making rapid strides in public favor of late. The remarkable series of "Special Numbers," which was begun last September, became popular at once, and the development of the novel idea has been watched with growing interest, as the story-writers of one nation after another are thus presented to the American public. The present issue a "Special English Number," offers a striking contrast to its immediate predecessor, which was more than half composed of tales from the Spanish. It contains specimens of the best work of such well known contemporary writers as James Payn, Walter Besant, Conan Doyle and F. Anstey; while selections from Miss Mitford, Captain Marryatt and Wilkie Collins reveal the spirit of earlier generations. There are also a special Valentine story by Mary E. Wilkins, brilliant French tales by Guy de Maupassant, Jacques Normand and Ferdinand Fleury, and an original sketch of Western life by Ed Towse. This magazine is issued by Romance Publishing Company, Clinton Hall, Astor Place, New York, at 25 cents a copy; subscriptions $3.50 per year.

A Regular Trap.

A Culbertson woman went to bed with gum in her mouth. She awoke in the morning with a dead mouse between her teeth. The woman had gone to sleep with her mouth open and the mouse, attracted by the gum, stuck his head in to secure it, when the jaws must have come together like a steel trap. Terrible jaw!

Fond Hanging by the Neck. There are sights that appeal the heart—sights from which strong men are compelled to turn their gaze sickened with the contemplation. Such was the scene that met the eyes of some of the people of McCook, on Thursday morning, when a young and beautiful girl was found hanging by the neck. That a girl, young, beautiful, accomplished—with nothing to wish for, should commit such a rash deed, is almost beyond belief. Imagine the sight of her, hanging with staring eyes, her dark hair streaming in long, loose coils over her shoulders, her delicate fingers tightly clenched, every feature marking the ordeal she had passed through! And then think what must have been the feelings of her doting father, her loving mother, and the dear brothers and sisters, as they were compelled to gaze upon such a scene!

No explanation could be found that could account for the suddenly formed purpose. On the day before, she was even gayer than usual, and her gaiety was remarked by the young companions, who little dreamed of the situation she would be found in next morning. On Wednesday evening she played, sang, chatted with her young friends in the highest spirits; and about eight o'clock accompanied by the young gentleman to whom she was engaged, went out to call on some acquaintances, where her unusual brightness was also noticed. And to think, that on the very next morning, the whole community should be shocked by the announcement that she was found hanging—yes, hanging—from Harry's neck, as she bade him good-bye, before starting out on his trip east.
