THE present warfare on silver is neither prudent nor patriotic.

THE sub-treasury scheme and the two per cent farm loan fake are now but reminiscences.

IF confidence is all we need perhaps its free and unlimited coinage would be in order, just at this time.

THE whyfore of the studied and persistent attack on Governor Crouse by certain republican papers is still somewhat indistinct.

THE Hastings Democrat thinks that a democratic newspaper, emphasis on the word newspaper, can be established and maintained with reasonable profit to the publisher—if he is the right kind of a man—in McCook. The Hastings publisher is, however, one of the number of those who have proved quite conclusively to the contrary.

THE average reserve held by Nebraska national banks is 28.38 per cent or 3.38 per cent more than the legal requirement. While the New York city national banks are collectively $14,000,000 short of the 25 per cent reserve, and are bolstering themselves up with clearing house certificates of which $35,000,000 worth have already been issued.

SPEAKING of confidence THE TRIBUNE fancies that a responsible increase in our circulation—more money being incorporated into the body business—would do as much as anything else so far suggested to restore that essential article to the perturbed business world. Confidence, after all, must have something tangible and substantial upon which to feed.

GOVERNOR FURNAS is just shipping 100,000 Nebraska folders to the world's fair for distribution that are furnished gratis by the state board of agriculture. They are folders that contain the best information condensed so as to be read by all and they will do a power of good. The state fair people know the kind of work counts and they are very liberally supplying the existing vacancy.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has submitted his message to congress. It is in some respects a bitter disappointment, in others a sweet boon. On the silver question the president boldly abandons his party and platform, and drops into the single gold standard camp bodily, calling aloud for the unconditional repeal of Sherman's innocent little compromise, but suggesting no remedy. Tariff reform is esteemed of secondary importance. The paper has literary worth, but no specific remedial value. It is brief.

THE break in the 100 million dollar gold reserve in the United States Treasury was the beginning of the financial scare. It precipitated the alarm which seized the people and impelled them to make runs on the banks and draw out their money. It gave rise to ominous prophecies in the East which spread fear and apprehension throughout the West. The reserve has now been restored, with nearly a million dollars of free gold to spare and there is more coming. By a very plain process of logic the restoration of the gold reserve should revive and stimulate confidence. It removes the original cause of distrust and the effect ought to be a speedy renewal of faith in the national credit and the stability of the country's finances. The country is now waiting, breathless, to see if it will or not. Perhaps few will be disappointed if it does not, however.

Wm. Weygint, who went to Chicago a couple weeks ago as a representative of the farmers of the southwestern counties to look into the condition of the Nebraska exhibit and to arrange for putting in specimens from the new crop has returned to Lincoln, and tomorrow will go on to the Republican valley. He has something to say about the state of things at Jackson park that would make the ears of the commissioner general tingle most uncomfortably should he overhear them. Mr. Weygint will recommend that in case the governor puts a good man in Mr. Garneau's place a large quantity of the products of the southwestern counties be gathered and displayed as attractively as possible. If no change is made he states emphatically that he will not recommend the expenditure of another dollar on the exhibit. He thinks the state has been disgraced and that it would be well to be very quiet and inconspicuous during the remainder of the fair. It might be well to give Mr. Weygint's story in his own words: "I went down to Chicago, as I told you I would," said the hale old farmer, "to see how the state show was getting on. I stayed nine days and came away ashamed of the state and clean put out by the way we have been fooled and our money's been spent. We went to the Nebraska building every morning and back there every afternoon about 4 o'clock, and there wasn't anybody there except the lady that takes care of the register and a janitor or two. There was nobody to tell strangers anything and nobody to show any courtesies to the visitors. Us farmers, you know, feel a little technical about that—we want to be treated as well as anybody. Well, we didn't see a man about the place in all the nine days that we were there that had anything to do with the state or could tell any thing about it. I don't know where Mobley or Garneau were—if playing dominoes and having a good time, I guess." Mr. Weygint who is a machinist as well as a farmer is enthusiastic over the fair as a whole. He was particularly pleased with the showing made by the United States in machinery and manufactured products. He considered the American machinery finer than any made abroad, and was astonished at the improvements made since he left the shop some thirty years ago. Every part of the fair commanded his admiration except the Nebraska exhibit. Every time he mentioned that it was with an expression of disgust and sorrow. He will use every ounce of influence he can command in the Republican valley to secure the appointment of a competent man to take the place of Mr. Garneau.

Strictly for Cash.

The very unusual stringency in financial circles makes it absolutely necessary for us to adopt a strictly cash basis on which to conduct business in the future, and we fondly hope that our many old friends and customers will appreciate the situation, which is imperative, and will in the future give us their trade, as in the past. We can save you money by selling for cash, as well as protect ourselves.
