BISHOP POLK'S QUICK WIT.

How He Saved Himself From Capture When Inside the Federal Lin

Bishop Polk of Louisiana, who served so zealously in the Confederate army, had one adventure at the battle of Persyville which is best told in his own words. He says:

About dark, shortly after the arrival of Liddeii's brigade, I observed a body of men whom I believed to be Confederates standing at an angle to this brigade and firing obliquely at the newly arrived troops. "Dear me," said I, "this is very sad.

It must be stopped." So I turned round, but could find none of my young men, who were about on various me determined to ride up myself and settle the matter. I cantered up to the colonel of the regiment, asked him in angry tones what he meant by shooting at his friends and desired him to cease doing so at once.

"I don't think there can be any mistake about it," he said, with some surprise. "I am sure they are the enemy." "Enemy!" I said. "Why, I have only just left them myself. Cease firing, sir! What is your name, sir?"

"My name is Colonel ---- of the and pray, sir, who are you?"

Then, for the first time, I saw to my stonishment that he was a Federal, and that I was in the rear of the Federal lines. I knew there was no hope but in brazening it out, my dark blouse and the increasing obscurity befriending me, so I approached quite close to him, shook my fist in his face and said: • "I'll soon show you who I am. Cease firing at once!"

I then turned my horse and cantered slowly down the line, shouting in an authoritative manner to the Federals to cease firing.

At the same time I experienced a disagreeable sensation like screwing up my back and calculating how many bullets could lie between my shoulders. I was afraid to increase my pace till I got to a small copse, and then I put the spurs in and galloped back to my men. I rode up to the nearest officer and said to him, "Colonel, I have reconnoitered those fellows pretty closely, and there is no mistake about their being Federals!"-Youth's Companion.

Religious Foot Washing In Paris.

The church, being fond of striking contrasts, put forth all her pomp while the archbishop was going through the humiliations of the ceremonial. Strictly speaking, there is no foot washing. The 12 indigent old men had their feet washed before they came to the cathedral.

When seated there in a row, stockingless, but with slippers resembling those worn by seabathers at Trouville, the archbishop approaches them, attended by his vicars general. One of these ecclesiastics bears a golden ewer, with a narrow neck, in which is scented water, and the other a basin and napkins of fine damask linen. A footstool is before each old man. The basin is set on it by the archbishop. This done, the person whose feet are to be washed withdraws them from the canvas slippers and holds them over the basin. His grace then pours a few drops of water over each foot. This done, a towel is handed to him, and he wipes the water away.

As there are 12 persons to be attended to, this office, which is taken to symbolize Christian charity and humility, is repeated as many times. A grand proession, followed by an anthem, ends the service.-Paris Correspondent London News.

Two Great Days.

The teacher was instructing the arithmetic class in history. "On what day is Washington's birthday?" she inquired. "Twenty-second of February," answered the class. "And Independence day?"

"The Fourth of July."

"What is the difference between the two days?'

This seemed to be a poser, and no re ply was forthcoming. Finally a youngster who had been scribbling on a slip of paper held up his hand.

"Good for you, Johnny," said the teacher encouragingly. "Now tell us what the difference is between these two of the greatest days in our national history.'

"Four months and 12 days, ma'am," and the teacher was shocked, because she had forgotten there was an arithmetic side to the question as well as a history one. - Detroit Free Press.

Ash Wednesday.

Ash Wednesday is so called from the curious custom of strewing ashes on the head as a sign of penitence. It was probably instituted by Gregory the Great, who was pope from 590 to 604. Originally the ashes were consecrated on the altar before mass, sprinkled with holy water and signed three times with the cross. During this ceremony the priest re-cited these words, "Memento quod cinis es et in cinerem reverteris." (Remember that thou art dust and must return to dust.) The ashes thus consecrated were then strewn on the heads of the officiating priests and the assembled people. The ashes were usually obtained by burning the palms consecrated on the preceding (Palm) Sunday.-St. Louis Republic.

An Eventful Day.

"Well, well!" exclaimed the editor. "If that wasn't a queer experience!" "What was that?" said the foreman. "There was a man in here just now who didn't seem to know any more about how a newspaper should be run than i do."-Washington Star. her heart and life as if he had never been.

Then he felt as he never had before, if not all that she had been, all that she might have been to him.

It was Arthur Reeves' misfortune that he could not resist the voice of flattery, especially from the lips of a pretty woman Did such smile upon him or hang upon his accents with delight, partly real, partly feigned, for the time being she swayed and seemed to fill his heart wholly. He wooed Agnes Irwin eagerly and per sistently-for she was not a woman to be won unsought-never resting until he knew that her whole heart was his.

It was not that he did not know how rich was the treasure he had won: to be loved so entirely and exclusively would have been gratifying to any man, but he was one of those with whom a love once won has lost its charm. Arthur made no attempt to change a purpose that he well knew was unchangeable. He married a few months after, and no one prayed more fervently for his happiness than did she from whose life he had taken much of its bloom and brightness. Some years after, when what we have recorded was looked upon as a troubled dream, in taking up a paper her attention was arrested by the following paragraph:

"Arthur Reeves, a well known merchant -----, has eloped with a gay young widow. The guilty pair left for Europe on the last steamer. The scoundrel leaves behind him a wife, whose conduct has been irreproachable, and three children. Mrs. Reeves returned yesterday to her father's house, which she left six years ago as a happy bride."

When the shock that this gave her had subsided, what grateful emotions swelled her heart that hers were not those worse than fatherless children; that she was not that more than widowed wife, returning in shame and sorrow to her father's house! -Boston Globe.

Ancient Hospitals.

Ancient Egyptian records are vague in their allusions to the treatment of the sick, but it seems likely, from a legend which is given in the Papyrus Ebers, that a clinic existed in connection with the temple of Heliopolis. It is equally probable that, if the history of the temples of Æsculapius could be unveiled, we should find that in them also a hospital supplemented the shrine, and that the sick who offered sacrifices there found something more than "faith healing" within their walls. But from none of these are our hospitals de rived; they were destroyed or forgotten in the barbarian conquests, and so utter is the oblivion into which they fell that it is now an article of the popular creed that it is to Christianity we owe the first idea of care for the sick and afflicted .- Quarterly Review.
