THE CORSAGE BOUQUET.

The corsage bouquet is in again; but the only flower which is really chic and worn by the smart women on the avenue is the English violet. Larger bunches of these are worn than ever before; often they are from six to eight inches in diameter. They are tied with many loops and ends of inch-wide violet satin ribbon, and fastened on the bust just in the center of the corsage. With evening dress, a slightly smaller bunch is often fastened just in front of the left shoulder, half of it resting on the left shoulder, half of it resting on the bare neck. With white or black gowns the effect is very chic; but they are also worn with those of pale pink or blue satin, says Chat in Demorest's Magazine for June.

THERE is a sentiment crystallizing for Jack MacColl in western Nebraska which, if properly nurtured, will give him a formidable following in the coming state convention. This section of the state should make a stand for governor, and Jack MacColl is a good man to rally around.

C. W. HYATT, for many years editor of the Fremont Flail, is selling all his personal property and will soon move to a warmer climate.

"The Trans-Missouri Land Co." is the name of a lately organized immigration bureau that extends from Chicago to Denver, with its principal office at Omaha. The object of this company is to place Nebraska farm land before home-seekers and investors in the states east of it, in the most advantageous and systematic manner and thereby insure their sale and settlement. Messrs. Burke & Fuller of this city have secured the counties of Chase, Dundy, Hayes, Hitchcock, and the west half of Red Willow as their exclusive field of operation for the sale of land in connection with this association, with their headquarters at McCook.—Imperial Enterprise.
