Supt. Campbell, Roadmaster Rogers, Bridgeman Perry and others are putting in most of their time now out at Denver watching the movements of the commonwealer's, who are massing along the Burlinton track to capture a train for the east.

Chas. Teel was called from his ranch twenty-five miles from McCook by a dispatch announcing that his wife, who is living at Cowles, was seriously sick. He arrived here on train 16, Monday, and we are glad to report that his wife is considerably better.—Red Cloud Belt.

Contractor Kilpatrick has come down from the Burlington's road to Montana, and Messrs. Holdrege, Cady, Dietz and other Omaha men who have just been on the new line are enthusiastic over the prospect that the new road from this city will cross the Montana line soon and reach Billings and a connection with the Northern Pacific before the date set, which was October 15th. It is likely that trains with the Burlington trade mark will be tooting whistles in Billings by October 1st at the latest.—Alliance Grip.

Some new cars on one of the eastern railroads that have been constructed without the accustomed mirror at each end call out an indignant protest from the Phildelphia Press. That paper insists that although they may be neither beautiful nor artistic they serve a useful purpose. It is inificting an unwarranted hardship upon the women passengers to deprive them of an opportunity to see that their hair is properly curled and that their hats are setting correctly as they get up to leave the car. The women should institute a boycott to have the mirrors replaced in their usual positions.

It is still, as is has ever been, the aim of the Nebraska state board of agriculture, through its board of managers, to make each succeeding annual state fair and exposition excel in all respects any of its predecessors. For the year 1894 unusual efforts for extraordinary results to this end are being made. The state fair, manufacturers' and consumers' association for Nebraska and the state horticultural society combine and will hold their annual exhibits on the same grounds and on the same days. By this plan there will be presented, in the shape of a grand consolidated exposition, a complete aggregation of Nebraska's products and resources such as cannot fail to command the attention and admiration of our own people as well as those from abroad. We are sure it will be a pleasure to every friend of the state to aid in this meritorious undertaking. The impress made by the world's fair in 1893 on the fair making and fair going people of the United States is such as to insure higher grades and in all respects superior character of expositions. It will be well to keep in mind the place and dates of this Nebraska exposition—Lincoln, September 7th to 14th, 1894.

Shall we celebrate? If not, why not?

Want a Rainmaker.

Pursuant to a call issued, last Saturday, there was quite a large gathering of farmers and others at the city hall, Monday afternoon, to confer in regard to the advisability of attempting to secure a rainmaker at this place, and to devise ways and means by which the drouth now prevailing may be broken. The meeting was called to order by H. H. Berry, and S. P. Hart was chosen chairman, C. H. Boyle, secretary. After an informal discussion of the conditions that exist and of the methods to be persued a committee of six, consisting of W. A. Stewart, V. Franklin, H. H. Benson, Joseph Menard, S. P. Hart and P. A. Wells was appointed for the purpose of conferring with the rainmakers now experimenting at Beatrice and other points, to ascertain on what terms an attempt may be secured to be made at this place, and generally to learn all that they may be able bearing on the matter in point. Said committee to report at a meeting to be held in the city hall on coming Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Considerable interest was manifested in the matter, showing a deep concern to be existing among our farmers and business men in view of the continued drouth. There are the faithless and the believing. But there are a good many in favor of attempting to do something.

Willow Grove Addition

Is the only part of McCook in which you can be independent and control your own water. If you find a nuisance like Meeker prowling about the back yard you can "abate" him by turning hot or cold water on him, and he can't hide behind Cap. Phillips or the city ordinance.

You have to pay about the same for water from the Lincoln Land Company in McCook that you do for rent of your house. In Willow Grove Addition you can dig a well, put up a windmill and tank for about what it costs you to pay water tax in other parts of McCook for one year.

C. F. Babcock will sell you lots at from $50 to $200 in this addition that are just as good, nearer the high school and as near the business center of McCook as lots for which the Lincoln Land Company will charge you from $200 to $500.

The Pride of McCook.

THE McCOOK TRIBUNE—first and foremost in Republican valley journalism—has rounded out an even dozen years of prosperity, eleven of which have been under the able management of F. M. Kimmell. Uniformly on the right side of questions local or general, bright, clean, newsy, and not given to "slopping over," it is no wonder that THE TRIBUNE is the pride of McCook.—Beaver City Tribune.

The Band Concert.

The concert given, last Saturday evening, by the Nebraska Brigade Band, K. P. U. R., was perhaps the finest ever rendered by the band, and attracted a large and delighted gathering of our citizens. The music was of the highest order and the rendition artistic. McCook has one of the finest band organizations in Nebraska, and the fact is a matter of pleasurable pride to all our people.

The Master Wasn't In.

One of our leading business men and citizens made an amusing, though measurably excusable error, Saturday morning, of calling at the Times-Democrat office and blandly inquiring if Mr. Meeker was in. Upon being assured that was not Mr. Meeker's office, the gentleman retired, after stating that he thought Mr. Meeker was running that paper, judging from the issue of last week. But the tool was.

An Unusual Cloud Effect.

Quite a remarkable and unusual cloud effect was visible about noon, Saturday, from this place, in the southeastern sky. It looked like the reflection from a rainbow—although that charming phenomenon was not visible. The brilliant colors falling upon the fleecy, broken clouds high up in the blue vault produced a beautiful picture, which, however soon disappeared from view.

Ole Olson Drowned.

Tuesday afternoon, while in bathing in company with a party of men, a young man named Ole Olson, whose parents live on the Blackwood north of Culbertson, was drowned in the big lake on the Meeker irrigation ditch west of the narrows.

We understand that the water is quite deep where the sad tragedy occurred. That there is something in the nature of a small whirlpool caused by the water entering the lake with considerable current. Into this the young man was drawn, and being a poor swimmer, and the members of the party being afraid to venture in to his assistance, he sank from sight after a brief struggle.

The persons with the young man were evidently badly rattled, as we are informed that there is a boat on the lake with which aid might have been rendered, had those with him been cool headed and quick.

Word reached this city about supper time, and William Little, who is in the employ of the ditch company, started at once for the scene of the drowning. He recovered the body about ten o'clock the same night, and the remains were taken to a farm house in the neighborhood.

The young man was about twenty years of age.

Tha remains were subsequently taken in charge by the relatives and buried, Thursday, in Culbertson.

The June number of the Chicago Magazine presents another axample of the well-balanced periodical which cannot fail of an appreciative reception by those readers of current literature who wish a wide range of subjects presented in a single number. Variety is the spice of life. Poetry, romance and the discussion of political and sociological matter, all find a place in this popular magazine, which is rapidly growing in favor.
