A WESTERN Nebraska veteran says that in his opinion windmill and pump irrigation is destined to play an important part in the redemption of large areas in the semi-humid belt. While we are working on ditch plans and talking about storage reservoirs it should not be forgotten that tens of thousands of farmers in western Nebraska have it in their own power to support their families in all kinds of years by arranging to have the winds pump water out onto a few favorably located acres. Five acres well cultivated and regularly watered will keep the farmer from want. The natural rainfall will give him enough grain on the remainder of his farm in average years to furnish him a fine profit.—State Journal.

PROF. W. E. ANDREWS, the Republican candidate for congress, has a splendid opportunity this time to defeat his antagonist, W. A. McKeighan. Times are wonderfully changed and with the unfaithfulness of the Democratic party to its constituency and the inactivity in congress, there is not anything but success for republicans this fall. Prof. Andrews is the equal of his opponent in every way, and espousing the cause of republicanism earnestly, he surely has the advantage over his adversary.—Red Cloud Chief.

The idea that this is a majority ruled government is but an amusing popular fallacy, and must cause the comparatively small minority that manipulates our governmental affairs, great and small, many an excusable smile. Like the immortal Phineas T. the politicians have learned that the American people love to be humbugged, and the wish is gratified.
