THE FAMOUS.

Burlington officials state in connection with their recent trip over the entire system that they find the condition of Nebraska as very encouraging, and the road in good shape, but that there will be little or no railroad building in the state during 1897.

C. W. Britt received a telegram, Tuesday, from San Jose, California, announcing the death of his brother L. H., who very recently went there for his health. The remains will likely be shipped to Plattsmouth for burial. Mr. Britt's many warm friends deeply sympathize with him in this bereavement.

The Burlington depot at Hyde, Colorado, was destroyed by fire, Monday morning. A tramp broke into the building to obtain shelter from the storm, and starting a fire on the floor fell asleep. He awoke in time to save his worthless hide, but the depot was entirely destroyed. The depot has been closed to the public for two or three years. The loss is small.

Monday, March 15th, the Los Angeles Daily Times was issued under auspices of the Order of Railroad Conductors, which will hold its biennial convention in the city of the angels commencing May 11th. The issue is largely devoted to illustrations and letter press of the subject of transportation and contains much of interest and instruction. We are under obligation to Conductor W. D. Beyrer for a copy of the special issue, which has a handsomely illuminated cover.

Dotes on Sutton's Shells.
H. P. Sutton has some green shells, specially loaded for elephants, which he takes pleasure in loaning to amateur sportsmen. Dr. Gage went out duck hunting with Sutton, Monday, and running short of ammunition the doctor was forced to draw on the greens. Presently a red-neck came flying directly toward the doctor, who drew a dead-head on the duck, shut both eyes and pulled the trigger. Great Gemima! Both barrels go almost simultaneously, and the doctor followed suit, landing on his back in a pool of water. The doctor's dignity was slightly shattered, but there was no other damage. Sutton can't tell what became of the red-neck for laughing. The doctor will bet his money on the red in the future. The hunters were, nevertheless, rewarded with an overflowing game bag.

Death of Agent Griffin.

John A. Griffin, Burlington agent at Eckley, Colorado, died of dropsy about nine o'clock Sunday night. The remains were interred in Longview cemetery here, Wednesday afternoon, services being conducted at two o'clock in the Methodist church by Rev. J. A. Badcon. The deceased was an old employee of the Burlington and was well known and highly esteemed by employes in all departments of the service, many of whom attended the funeral services here. The funeral, by request of Wray lodge, of which deceased was a member, was conducted by the Masonic lodge of our city. The deceased was also an Oddfellow. He carried $750 Burlington Relief insurance. The wife, mother and children have the sympathy of all in their sorrow.
