

THE CROPS IN NEBRASKA

Hot, Dry Weather Sends Along Corn to Maturity With a Rush.

RAIN IN SOME SECTIONS.

Central Portion of the State Gets a Fair Share of Moisture, but Other Portions Suffer—Fall Plowing Well Under Way.

The past week, says the last Nebraska crop bulletin, has been hot and dry, with an excess of sunshine, and brisk southerly winds.

The average daily temperature excess varied from 5 degrees in the western counties to somewhat more than 7 degrees in the eastern. The daily maximum temperatures were above 90 degrees generally on the last three days of the week and in many southern counties were above 100 degrees.

The rainfall has been light and consisted of showers the first days of the week. In most of the southern and in a few central and northern counties the rainfall exceeded one-half of an inch and in small areas exceeded one inch. In a considerable portion of the state the rainfall was less than one-tenth of an inch and in many places no measurable amount fell.

The cloudless days and high temperature of the past week have caused corn to advance toward maturity very rapidly. In the northern counties and in sections where the moisture was sufficient this has been exceedingly favorable for corn. In many sections the lack of moisture, combined with the high temperature, has caused corn to dry out and ripen too rapidly. This will cause much chaffy corn in the southeastern counties and will quite generally reduce the yield of corn in the southern counties.

Fall plowing has made good progress but the ground is getting too dry in some counties. A little rain has been sown. Pastures need rain. Report by counties:

SOUTHEASTERN SECTION.

Hamilton—Thrashing out of shock in progress; good headway being made in plowing, but getting rather dry; too dry for corn.

Lancaster—Corn has made good progress; pastures getting short; cutting of wild grass for hay begun.

National Shriners Day.

One of the liveliest days of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition period in Omaha will be National Shriners' Day, September 14. Invitations have been sent to the 50,000 members of Shriner Temples in the United States and Canada and the local committee is expecting an attendance of upwards of 5,000.

The arrangements for the reception and entertainment of visiting nobles are in the hands of a joint committee of Tangier Temple of Omaha and Sesostri Temple of Lincoln, Neb. This committee is working with great vigor, and will do all in its power to make the occasion a memorable one even in Shriner annals.

A reception will be given to the visitors on the evening of Tuesday, September 13, at which every one will have an opportunity to become acquainted. The following day will be spent entirely on the Exposition grounds. The managers of the Exposition have turned over the Auditorium to the Shriners for their exclusive use during the day, and at 11 o'clock in the forenoon speeches of welcome will be distributed. After luncheon the Shriners from States which have state buildings on the grounds will give receptions to Shriners from other states in their respective buildings and zem zem bowls will be provided, by permission of the managers of the Exposition, in each of the buildings.

At 2 o'clock a concert will be given in the Auditorium and the remainder of the afternoon will be given up to visiting the Exposition buildings and inspecting exhibits. At 7 there will be a grand Shriner parade through the grounds, ending up at the Midway, where arrangements have been made for the Shriners to visit the various attractions in detachment. A brilliant display of fireworks will be given by the Exposition management at 9, the set pieces to be special Shriner designs. After the fireworks the remaining hours of the evening will be spent by the visitors at the Midway.

At 10 o'clock on Thursday morning, September 15th, special trains on the Missouri Pacific and Union Pacific railways will carry the Shriners to South Omaha. The Swift Packing Company has extended invitations to all Shriners to visit their packing house and inspect the works. Dinner will be provided by Swifts to the entire party at 12 o'clock.

At 2 o'clock a session will be held at Boyd's opera house in Omaha, and simultaneously a special play for the benefit of the Shriner party only will be presented at the Creighton theater, which has been especially engaged by the Shriners for the afternoon.

At 6 o'clock, a buffet lunch will be given for the visiting Shriners at two of the leading hotels of the city, and at 7 there will be a big parade through the principal downtown streets. The parade will be under the direction of Mr. Benyaker, of the Streets of All Nations on the Midway, who has promised to bring out all his donkeys and camels, which will give it a more than usually Oriental character.

Modern Woodmen at the Exposition.

Preparations have been well nigh completed by the head camp of the Modern Woodmen of America for a great celebration on the Trans-Mississippi Exposition grounds on Woodmen Day, Thursday, September 22. A joint committee of the Omaha, South Omaha and Council Bluffs camps is assisting in the work of arranging the details and the event will undoubtedly be an epoch in the history of Woodcraft.

Among the features of the program for the day will be speechmaking, a parade, competitive drill and fire-works. In the forenoon exercises will be held at three or four of the leading hotels and at the quarters of the Trans-Mississippi Traveling Men's Club, which has been placed at the disposal of the Shriners during their stay at Omaha.

After the parade receptions will be held at three or four of the leading hotels and at the quarters of the Trans-Mississippi Traveling Men's Club, which has been placed at the disposal of the Shriners during their stay at Omaha.

In the evening there will be a brilliant display of fireworks. The set pieces will include fire portraits of Head Consul Northcutt and Head Clerk Humes of the Modern Woodmen and Supreme Oracle Mrs. Watts of the Royal Neighbors. Emblems of both societies will also be shown in fire. Neighbors of the Modern Woodmen and of the Royal Neighbors in all parts of the country are expected to take advantage in large numbers of the low railroad rates granted for Woodmen Day to visit what is conceded to be one of the grandest of the world's great expositions.

Nebraska to the Front Again.

Over in the Horticulture building Nebraska got to the front yesterday, says the Omaha Bee, and exhibited a variety of fruit not heretofore seen. Winter plums were put upon the tables for the first time and they proved a curiosity to many of the old fruit-growers, who had never heard of anything of that kind before. The plums are nearly as large as the Idaho prunes and are of a deep purple. They are left on the trees until they drop off of their own accord. Even then they are almost as hard as rocks. After being picked up they are packed away in boxes and barrels and placed in storage. Late in the fall or early in the winter they become mellow and take on a flavor that is equal to that of ripe plums picked at this season of the year.

The winter plums have never gone upon the market in this section of the country and it is not likely that they will for some time, as they are very scarce. Those shown were raised by Fred Behlin, a farmer residing near Columbus, who secured them by experimenting with other varieties, and to his surprise he has secured a plum that will keep as well as a winter apple. He has no patent upon the experiment, still he is not telling anyone how he obtained the results that have rewarded his efforts.

Douglas county has brought out the first Concord grapes of the season.

TROUBLE IN 20TH KANSAS.

Col. Funston May Bring Charges Against Little.

AN OPEN RUPTURE BREAKS OUT

The Kansas Regiment's Second Officer Recommended Promotions to Governor Leedy—The Dissension Has Been Brewing Since Funston's Arrival.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—Because Lieutenant Colonel Little wrote to Governor Leedy recommending certain promotions in the Twentieth Kansas regiment he may be court-martialed for insubordination. It has long been known in the camp there was ill feeling between Colonel Funston and Lieutenant Colonel Little. Its growth has been watched with increasing interest from day to day and lately there have been many predictions of an open rupture. It came last night. Colonel Funston then made a discovery that made his blood boil. He has laid the matter before General Miller and there is every prospect that Colonel Little will have to answer to serious charges before a court martial.

Since last June, when Colonel Funston took command of the regiment, strained relations have existed between the colonel and his subordinate, who, before his arrival, had been in command.

Little knew nothing about the discipline or drilling of a regiment, and as a consequence his superior officer had a difficult task upon his arrival in bringing the Twentieth Kansas to good order. During the last two months quarrels have been frequent between the two, more particularly since the regiment's recent removal from Camp Merritt to the Presidio. At one time it was rumored that Little was to be requested to resign.

"No, this is not the first nor the second time Little and I have fallen out," said Colonel Funston. "We have not agreed upon any one thing since we have been together in the regiment. There is no use, however, of discussing our past relations. I am concerned only about the present difficulty."

"On the 17th of this month I sent recommendations for three appointments to my regiment to Governor Leedy. Second Lieutenant A. C. Alford I recommended for a first lieutenantcy, and Sergeant Major F. R. Dodge and Sergeant C. H. Ball for second lieutenantcies. Colonel Little sent by that same mail, without informing me of his action, his recommendations for two other men for the first lieutenantcy and one for the second lieutenantcies. No, I don't care to give their names; they were mere men, too, and not responsible for Colonel Little's error. He agreed with me in recommending Sergeant Ball for the other appointment."

"I received the acknowledgment of my recommendations from Governor Leedy's secretary this afternoon. The governor was not in town, but his secretary wrote that the papers would be presented to his notice immediately upon his arrival. Little's recommendations must undoubtedly have reached home as soon as mine. They may prevail with the governor over mine. Little was the governor's private secretary when the war broke out and of course has a political pull, while I have none."

"If his recommendations prevail and officers are put in here over my head, this regiment is going to witness all the changes of a tropical climate—but that isn't the story. It was only yesterday that I learned of Little's action, and you may imagine how I took the news. Unluckily, or, perhaps, luckily, I could not find Colonel Little. I fancy something very unpleasant would have occurred in view of the frame of mind I was in then."

"Last night I asked him if my information as to his unwarrantable action was correct. He replied in the affirmative. I asked him if he thought that he had military precedent for a subordinate's sending in such recommendations. He replied 'No,' but considered that he had done perfectly right, nevertheless. Then I told him that his conduct was to the prejudice of military discipline and that I intended to place him under arrest for insubordination. He did not relish the idea."

"Little is president of the court-martial now sitting in the Thomas affair, and I did not wish to inconvenience its workings and so did not carry out my threat. That he can be arrested and court-martialed for his offense I have good authority for believing, and I am still working on that matter."

"I have consulted with General Miller. He agrees with me that Colonel Little's action is a breach of military discipline and of military etiquette and an altogether outrageous proceeding in a subordinate officer. Now that I have had time to think the matter over I am not certain as to what my next move will be. Something decisive, however, must be done very soon. If Little's recommendations are acted upon favorably I hardly know what I should do. There certainly cannot be two colonels in a regiment and there never shall be two colonels in the Twentieth Kansas."

Colonel Funston appears to have the support of his brother officers, a group of whom surrounded him while he made the statement quoted. In all the quarrels between Funston and Little of the past two months it is said that the former has had the steady support of every officer.

MADE HIM A VEGETARIAN.

An Attack of "Schlerostompinguecola" Cost a Chicagoan $1,000

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—Mr. P. R. Barnes, a lawyer, has become a vegetarian. It was a simple thing which changed his habits. It was "schlerostompinguecola." In the bill of damages which he filed in the supreme court yesterday Mr. Barnes says that he bought the thing at Foster & Scarritt's meat market. It looked like a square meal. Because it was concealed in a big roast of beef, Barnes and his family ate the beef. The next day all were sick.

"You've all got 'schlerostompinguecola,'" said the doctor after he had examined the patients.

"What's that?" gasped Mrs. Barnes. "Well, it's an expensive disease," replied the medical man. In court Mr. Barnes said he paid $1,000 in doctors' bills and drugs before he and his family recovered. He sues the butchers for damages to that amount.
