What One Boy Did. By Anne Guilbert Mahon.

They were just sitting down to the table, twelve boys, their faces bright, their eyes sparkling with the anticipation of the dinner that was before them. It was Clifford Ray's birthday and his mother had said he might invite eleven of his friends to a dinner party.

Clifford was an only child and an only grandchild and, strange as it may seem, he was blessed with three grandmothers. The way he came to have more than his share of grandmothers was that his mother had married again, so there was her mother, his father's mother and his step-father's mother; stranger yet, they lived together, to all appearances in peace and concord, and vied with each other in petting and spoiling Master Clifford.

The boys lost no time in starting on the good things, and they ate as only healthy, growing boys can eat. They did not talk much at first, they were too busy for that; but they enjoyed themselves thoroughly, which made Mrs Ray and the three kind old grandmothers who waited on them, beam with pleasure.

After they had got fairly started, to sell out at an appraised valuation | Mrs. Ray unlocked the door of a little cupboard, built in the wall, and said smilingly, "Now, boys! I am going to give you your choice of some very fine wine. I have all kinds here, and you can take your choice, in honor of Clifford's birthday."

"Oh, that's fine, mother!" exclaimed Clifford. "Come, boys, what kind will you have?"

No one answered, so Mrs. Ray turned to the boy at the head of the table, George Warner, the biggest of the twelve, and the most popular; George usually took the lead in everything.

As Mrs. Ray turned to him, he answered politely, but without the slightest hesitation, "I won't take any, thank you, Mrs. Ray."

The boys looked at him in surprise, and Clifford's mother said, "What! Not any wine? Oh, you are not so particular! Of course it wouldn't do for boys to make a practice of drinking it; but this is something extra. and a glass won't hurt you; it will make a man of you."

George was tempted to reply that he knew just what kind of a man it would make of him, he had seen men like that; but he did not like to say anything rude to Mrs. Ray, so he answered politely but as firmly as before, "No, thank you. I really can't take it. Please don't urge me!" "Come, now! You won't refuse a lady, I'm sure!" All eyes were turned on George. He colored slightly as Mrs. Ray poured out a glass of the sparkling beverage and set it before him; but his resolve was not shaken and he repeated, "I'm sorry to have to refuse you anything. but indeed, I can't take it."

Mrs. Ray was evidently annoyed. "Well, I won't press you, if it's against your principles to drink it," she said, and turned to the next boy with, "Well, you'll take it, Harry Clark?"

George's refusal had given Harry courage to act. He knew his mother would not want him to take the wine; but he would not have been strong enough to refuse if it had not been for his friend's example, so he said, "I don't believe I'll take any, either, Mrs. Ray."

Frank Miller, who sat next to Harry said the same, and so it went all around the table until it came to Clifford.

"You'd better shut up the cupboard, mother, I don't believe any of the fellows want it." Then they went on eating their dia-ner and were soon as merry as if the interruption had not occurred. The incident was seemingly forgotten. But there was one who did not forget it. In the next room there was a listener of whom none of the boys

> It reminded him of the time when he took his first glass of wine and then he thought of the events which followed. Like all drunkards, at times, he would have given anything he possessed to break the awful bondage, and he now wished heartily that when he had been offered his first glass he had, like George, had the courage to refuse. Then the thought came to him. "Am I going to be outdone by a boy twelve years old? What he can do, I can; it isn't too late yet. If God will only forgive me and help me, I'll never touch another drop."

> A few minutes later the boys and Mrs. Ray and the three grandmothers were greatly surprised to see Howard Morse walk into the dining room and greet them cordially. Since he had started on the downward path he had kept taciturnly to himself when he was at home, and avoided meeting any of the people who visited there. This was > a new Howard, surely! After dinner, instead of hurrying out of the house, he joined the boys in the library. He was so entertaining, instituting new games, and telling thrilling stories, that no one could believe the clock right when its hands pointed to the hour for leaving.

Reluctantly the boys went home, after bidding "Uncle Heward" a hearty good-night.

As George was going Howard caught his arm and drew him aside,

"I want to tell you, George, that you have saved me tonight."

George's eyes opened wide in astonishment. "Saved you? 1?"

"Yes; it was your example in refusing the wine, that set me to thinking, and I resolved never to touch another drop of liquor or have it in the house. I would like to join your temperance society. I want to help save others who have been as low as I was."

George was very happy that night, and when he prayed to his Heavenly Father he did not forget to thank Him for the privilege which had been given to him, to save a soul by his example.

Howard Morse kept his word. He not only joined the temperance society, but later on the church, and was well known throughout the community as an earnest worker.

means of leading many from the "broad way that leadeth to destruction." And in all his lectures he never failed to give credit to the boy who had stood firm for his principles, and by his example, pointed him to the way in which he was now walking.

Birds on Her Hat.

That quick wit is not confined to cities was proved the other day by a young woman who was rambling along one of our roads.

She was dressed smartly, and when she met a small, bare-legged urchin carrying a bird's nest with eggs in it, she did not hesitate to stop him. "You are a wicked boy," she said.

"How could you rob that nest? No doubt the poor mother is now grieving for the loss of her eggs."

'Oh, she don't care," said the boy, edging away; "she's on your hat!"-Cape Ann (Mass.) Advertiser.

Mesmerized by a Ball.

One of the most interesting and novel effects in the new drama at the Princess, says the London Evening News, is the demonstration of mechanically produced hypnotism by means of the revolving crystal globe that gives its name to the piece. This globe, which is the latest invention of the French mesmerist, has such power that the actors and actresses on the stage have to exercise great care to keep their eyes away from it. There is no risk to the audience, as the globe is focused "up stage."

Two Brave Girls.

William Bridon, a proment farmer of Canal township, Franklin, Pa., was attacked by a vicious bull and fatally injured. Two brave daughters of the wounded man, hearing his cries for help, got axes and went to the assistance of their father. They went at the enraged animal in true butcher style. Blow after blow was sent home on the body and after a hard battle they finally dispatched it. The wounded man it is believed, cannot recover.

Telegraphic Typewriters.

An invention recently exhibited at a conversazione of the British Royal Society seems likely, so far as private house-to-house calls are concerned, to supersede the telephone. This contrivance is a telegraphic recorder, withcut a battery, invented by a Mr. Stelges. It requires no skill, and typewrites the message on the desk of the receiver, while retaining an identical copy in the hands of the sender. It is such a revolution in telegraphy that the postoffice, on the advice of W. H. Preece, has adopted it. and will install it wherever required by the public at a small cost.
