FLAWS IN BIG GUNS.

CESSIVE DISCHARGES.

"Erosive Action of Inflamed Gases" Causes the First Serious Injury-How the Projectile Helps to Kill the Gun.

The larger a cannon the more extensive are the injuries it receives with each successive discharge. All damage done to a gun is internal. The separate action of the powder and the projectile damages the piece every time it is aimed damage depends upon the material and workmanship of the gun. Men who make big guns describe the harm done their pets with many intricate and puzzling terms of a scientific turn. In one case a gun is damaged because the part of the bore which contains the powder is enlarged. This happens when the metal is compressed, and it is more dangerous and more plainly seen if the gunners have been using wads between

Then, again, cavities are produced by the melting away of a part of the metal by the heat of combustion of the charge. Cracks come from the tearing asunder of the particles of the metal at the surface of the bore. When it is first made, a crack of this particular kind is barely sold before anywhere. And they are perceptible, but it increases each time coming in now by the car-load Two the gun is fired. Gradually it extends completely through the side of the piece. The crack usually begins at the junction of the chamber with the bore. simply because, as guns now are, this part is not so well supported as the

Edward S. Farrow, U. S. A., is authority on damage to guns, although, like all others who have studied the question, he does not agree with very Berths, tickets and full information many authorities on all the points to consider in the life of a cannon. He contends that furrowing or scoring produced by the erosive action of inflamed gases is the great disease which attacks the very big guns first. This particular injury is most apparent where the current of the gas is most rapid or at the interior orifice of the vent and on the surface of the bore, directly over the seat of the projectile. This scoring begins very early in the life of a very large gun, but it is conceded that it does not become very important until the piece has been discharged considerably. Lieubrain and body. Only 25c at McCon- tenant Farrow describes this scoring as resembling the bark of an aged elm tree, the metal being eaten away into irregular furrows and ridges. In extreme pretty close call. cases, however, scoring has not killed the gun, although in some cases it has

ing the diameter of the cartridge and adding to its length. Projectile injury is also caused by furrows or scratches

Enlargement of the muzzle is another serious injury produced by the projectile. This is caused by a process which seems unavoidable. As the shell leaves the piece it strikes against one portion of the bore. The resistance at the mouth being less than at any other point, the metal naturally yields, and the muzzle of the cannon is elongated in a vertical direction. Some men who ought to know say that 150 shots is the life of a very big gun-a 12 or 13 inch weapon. Others place the number of shots at 400 or 500. As a matter of fact, it is all guesswork. The great Krupp gun shown at the World's fair and conceded to be perfect -or supposed to be so-has been discharged less than ten times, and it is now believed to have reached its limit. On the other hand, the big guns of the American battleships have passed the time allotted them by wise men who know guns and apparently are as good as when tested. How soon they may yield, however, is not in the books. Lieutenant Farrow says that a very large gun should not be expected to stand more than 400 or 500 shots before it will be necessary to open a new vent, closing the old one at its interior orifice. When the gun dies-bursts-the lines of fracture are photographed. Specimens of the metal are saved. Tests are made and conclusions drawn. And Uncle Sam has figured out so many things in this same connection that his guns nowadays are conceded to be better than those of any other maker. They live longer than the wise ones say they should.—Chicago Times-Herald.
