The Flying Dutchman.

BY CAPTAIN MARKYAT.

CHAPTERXXVII.—(Continued.) "We are Hollanders," replied Philip. "A part of the crew of the vessel which was wrecked?" inquired he. "Yes!"

"You have nothing to fear, you are we. We belong to the island of Ter-Portuguese, who are villains. Where are your companions? on which isl-

"Then God be thanked, she is saved," cried Philip. "Merciful Heaven! accept my thanks. To Tidore you said?"

"Yes; we are at war with the Portuguese, we cannot take you there." "No! but we shall meet again."

The person who accosted them was evidently of consequence. His dress was, to a certain degree, Mohammedan, but mixed up with Malay; he carried arms in his girdle and a spear in his hand; his turban was of printed chintz; and his deportment, like most persons of rank in that country, was courteous and dignified.

"We are now returning to Ternate, and will take you with us. Our king will be pleased to receive any Hol- her. landers, especially as you are enemies to the Portuguese dogs. I forgot to tell you that we have one of your companions with us in the boat; we picked him up at sea much exhausted, but he is now doing well,"

"Who can it be?" observed Krantz; "it must be some one belonging to some other vessel."

"No," replied Philip, shuddering, "it must be Schriften."

"Then my eyes must behold him before I believe it," replied Krantz.

"Then believe your eyes," replied Philip, pointing to the form of Schrif-

"Mynheer Vanderdecken, glad to see well. How lucky that we should all be saved. He! he!"

"The ocean has then, indeed, given up its dead, as I requested," thought Philip.

In the meantime Schriften, without making any reference to the way in which they had so unceremoniously parted company, addressed Krantz with apparent good humor and some slight tinge of sarcasm.

"What do you think of him, Krantz?"

"That he is a part of the whole, and has his destiny to fulfill as well as you. He has his part to play in this wondrous mystery, and will remain until it is finished. Think not of him. Recollect, your Amine is safe."

"True," replied Philip, "the wretch is not worth a thought; we have now nothing to do but to embark with these people; hereafter we may rid ourselves of him and strive then to rejoin my dearest Amine."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

When Amine again came to her senses she found herself lying on the leaves of the palmetto in a small hut. A hideous black child sat by her, brushing off the flies. Where was she?

She was taken to the Portuguese fort and turned over to the commandant. He subsequently released her under the promise that she would marry him-provded her husband was dead. She sailed for Goa, unexpectedly meeting her old pastor, who was returning from the far East.

We must now again return to Philip and Krantz, who had a long conver- is the fort to which Amine had been sation upon the strange reappearance taken. of Schriften. All that they could agree upon was that he should be carefully watched, and that they dispense with his company as soon as possible. Krantz had interrogated him as to his him, in his usual sneering manner, that one of the sweeps of the raft had been allowed to get adrift guring the scuffle, and that he had floated on it until he had gained a small island; that on seeing the peroqua, he had once more launched it, and supported himself by it, until he was perceived and picked up. As there was nothing impossible, although much of the improbable, in this account, Krantz asked no more questions. The next morning, the wind having abated, they launched the peroqua, and made sail for the island of Ternate.

It was four days before they arrived, as every night they landed and hauled up their craft on the sandy beach. Philip's heart was relieved at the knowledge of Amine's safety, and he could have been happy at the prospect of again meeting her had he not been so constantly fretted by the company of Schriften.

As soon as they arrived at the principal port and town of Ternate, they were conducted to a large cabin, built of palmetto leaves and bamboo, and requested not to leave it until their arrival had been announced to the king.

The peculiar courtesy and good breeding of these islanders was the constant theme of remark of Philip | who happened to be at his elbow.

. and Krantz; their religion, as well as their dress, appeared to be a compound of the Mohammedan and Malay-

After a few hours they were summoned to attend the audience of the eremies to the Portuguese, and so are king, held in the open air. The king was seated under a portico, attended nate-our king is at war with the by a numerous concourse of priests and they said nothing. The sailor was orsoldiers. The first thing they were ushered into the presence of the king was the beautiful cleanliness which everywhere prevailed; every picked up on the beach to the south- dress was spotless and white as the

> Having followed the example of those who introduced them, and saluted the king after the Mohammedan custom, they were requested to be seated; and through the Portuguese interpreters-for the former communication of the islanders with the Portuguese, who had been driven from the place, made the Portuguese language well know by many-a few questions were put by the king, who bade them welcome, and then requested to know how they had been wrecked.

Philip entered into a short detail, in which he stated that his wife had been separated from him, and was, he understood, in the hands of the Portuguese at Tidore. He requested to know if his majesty could assist him in obtaining her release, or in going to join

"It is well said," replied the king. "Let refreshments be brought in for the strangers, and the audience is broken up."

In a few minutes there remained of all the court but two or three of the king's confidential friends and advisers; and a collation of curries, fish, and a variety of other dishes was served up. After it was over, the king which I shall not fail to make use of. then said: "The Portuguese are dogs; they are our enemies-will you assist us to fight them? We have, large guns, but do not understand the use of them as well as you do. I will send ten, who was now walking toward a fleet against the Portuguese at Tidore, if you will assist me. Say, Hollanders, will you fight? You," adyou. Mynheer Krantz, I hope you are dressing Philip, "will then recover your wife." "I will give an answer to you tomorrow," replied Philip. "I must consult with my friend. As I told you before, I was the captain of the ship, and this was my second in command -we will consult together." Schriften, whom Philip had represented as a common seaman, had not been brought up into the presence of the king.

"It is good," replied the king; "tomorrow we will expect your reply."

Philip and Krantz took their leave. and on their return to the cabin, found that the king had sent them, as a present, two complete Mohammedan dresses, with turbans. These were welcome, for their own garments were sadly tattered and very unfit for exposure to the burning sun of those climes. Their peaked hats, too, collected the rays of heat, which were intolerable; and they gladly exchanged them for the white turban. Secreting their money in the Malayan sash, which formed a part of the attire, they garments, the comfort of which was immediately acknowledged. After a long consultation it was decided that they should accept the terms offered by the king, as this was the only feasible way by which Philip could hope to reobtain possession of Amine.

In ten days all was ready, and the fleet, manned by seven thousand men, made sail for the island of Tidore. But it met with disaster, Philip and Krantz being among those taken prisoners by the commandant of the Portuguese fort on Island of Tidore. This CHAPTER XXIX. As every one descants upon the want of comfort in a prison, it is to be presumed that there are no very comfortescape, and Schriften had informed able ones. Certainly that to which Philip and Krantz were ushered had anything rather than the air of an agreeable residence. It was under the fort, with a very small aperture looking toward the sea for light and air. It was very hot, and moreover destitute of all those little conveniences which add so much to one's happiness in modern houses and hotels. In fact, it consisted of four bare walls and a stone floor, and that was all.

> For three weeks they remained in the fort, every day becoming more intimate with the commandant, who often communicated with Krantz, when Philip was not present, turning the conversation upon his love for Amine and entering into a minute detail of all that had passed. Krantz perceived that he was right in his opinion, and that Amine had only been cajoling the commandant that she might escape. But the time passed heavily away with Philip and Krantz, for no vessel made its appearance. "When shall I see her again?" soliloquized Philip one morning, as he loll-

"See who?" said the commandant,

Philip turned round and stammered something unintelligible.

"We were talking of his sister, commandant," said Krantz, taking his arm, and leading him away. "Do not mention the subject to my friend, for it is a very painful one, and forms one reason why he is so inimical to the sex. She was married to his intimate friend, and ran away from her husband; it was his only sister, and the disgrace broke his mother's heart, and has made him miserable. Take no notice of it,

Some days after this conversation, as they were all three seated at table, a corporal entered, and, saluting the commandant, informed him that a Dutch sailor had arrived at the fort, and wished to know whether he should be admitted. Both Philip and Krants turned pale at this communicationdered in, and in a few minutes who tormentor, the one-eyed Schriften, On perceiving Philip and Krantz seated at the table he immediately exclaimed: "Oh, Captain Philip Vanderdecken, and my good friend Mynheer Krantz, first mate of the good ship Utrecht, I am glad to meet you again."

"Captain Philip Vanderdecken!" roared the commandant, as he sprang from his chair,

"Yes, that is my captain, Mynheer Philip Vanderdecken, and that is my first mate, Mynheer Krantz, both of the good ship Utrecht; we were wrecked together, were we not, mynheer? He! he!"

"Sangue de Vanderdecken! the husband! Corpo del diavolo-is it possible?" cried the commandant, panting for breath, as he seized his long sword with both hands and clinched it with fury. "What, then, I have been deceived, cajoled, laughed at!" Then. after a pause—the veins of his forehead distending so as almost to burst-he continued, with a suppressed voice: "Most noble sir, I thank you; but now it is my turn. What, ho, there! Corporal-men-here, instantly-quick!" Philip and Krantz felt convinced that all denial was useless. Philip folded his arms and made no reply. Krantz merely observed: "A little reflection will prove to you, sir, that this indignation is not warranted." "Not warranted!" rejoined the commandant, with a sneer; "you have deceived me; but you are caught in your own trap. I have the paper signed, You are dead, you know, captain; I have your own hand to it, and your wife will be glad to believe it."

Philip and Krantz were led away by the soldiers, who were very much surprised at this change of treatment. Schriften followed them; and as they walked across the rampart to the stairs which led to their prison, Krantz, in his fury, burst from the soldiers and bestowed a kick upon Schriften, which sent him several feet forward on his Krantz as he regained his legs. There was an eye, however, which met theirs with an intelligent glance as they descended the stairs to the dungeon. It was that of the soldier Pedro. It told them that there was one friend upon whom they could rely, soon robed themselves in the native and who would spare no endeavor to assist them in their new difficulty. It was a consolation to them both; a day of hope which cheered them as they once more descended the narrow steps and heard the Leavy key turned which secured them in their dungeon.

Her Parting Thrust. In the course of a call at a very jolly

place the other afternoon a girl was inspired to relate a good story. It met with such success that she was inspired to tell another, and yet another, all the other callers keeping up their appreciation-all the other callers but one, that is to say. The exception was a woman who looked as though she hoped her rigidity would be mistaken for hauteur, and who was evidently of very conservative notions. With visage grim and never a smile did she listen to the young woman's anecdotes, until it flashed through the latter's mind that she had somewhere heard that among the antediluvian races it wasn't considered good form for a woman to tell good stories. At | last this woman rose to go. To everybody but the girl she bowed and said: "Very glad to have met you." To the girl she observed, and in precisely the tone she would have complimented a poodle for its parlor tricks: "I've enjoyed your stories so much."-New York Evening Sun.

AGUINALDO AGGRESSIVE

Assembling a Large Force of Filipinos in Front of San Fernando.

PERSONAL COMMAND OF THE ARMY

American Soldiers Sleep on Their Arms -Transport Runs Aground and Large Amount of Cargo Thrown Overboard-Fighting Evidently Not Over Yet.

MANILA, June 24.—Agrinaldo does not seem to be satisfied with the attempt of the insurgents to retake San Fernando and he has taken command of General Luna's army and has masthey had a presentiment of evil, but sed the largest rebel force yet mobilized, bringing 2,000 men from the Antipolo region. He is exceedingly should make his appearance but their troublesome. Last night his men wounded two members of the Seventeenth regiment. General MacArthur's men are constantly on the alert to repel any attacks by the rebels, sleeping upon their arms. The general sincerely hopes that the Filipinos will give him another chance for a battle, for the soldiers really enjoy an opportunity to fight them when they can do so without wading through swamps to reach them.

Railway trains between Manila and San Fernando have been stopped for several days, while permanent repairs were being made to the bridges arr along the route, but today traffic was resumed.

The transport Centenniai, which has arrived here, had an exciding experience while rounding Point Engano, on the northern coast of Luzon, on its way to this port. It struck a rock on Wednesday and remained fast for several hours, during which time it was surrounded by swarms of natives in canoes, who became menacing. Captain Eagle, who commanded the transport, was compelled to throw overboard 100 tons of supplies in order to lighten the ship sufficiently to get it afloat. Before this was effected the Filipinos had towed the cases ashore and were fighting over the spoils. The cruiser Baltimore recently grounded at the same point, but the natives feared to approach it. WASHINGTON, June 24.-The war department has received no official dispatches relative to the grounding of the transport Centennial on the north end of Luzon and the loss of 100 tons of supplies which were thrown overboard to lighten the ship. According to the records here the Ceatennial carlieved they were all the property of the subsistence department. #### Troops for Africa. LONDON, June 24.-The Shropshire

LONDON, June 24 .- A dispatch from Cape Town to the Outlook says: 'The tension is extreme. Business is at a standstill and the general feeling is that England must promptly bring matters to an issue. The league will have no difficulty in preventing meetings supporting Sir Alfred Milner': attitude, the desire being to refrain from embarrassing the imperial authorities. The Orange government is urging the Transvaal to make further concessions. Many people consider that Sir Alfred Milner's franchise proposals are useless without the granting of twelve seats in the mining centers and the right to speak English in the Volksraad. Otherwise it will be impossible to select representative men. Failing these concessions the Johannesburgers say they prefer a treaty providing security and judicial and educational reforms.

Ploting Against Cabinet. PARIS, June 24.-The new cabinet ministers took possesssion of their offices today. The prefect of police, M. Blane, had a long interview with the premier, M. Waldeck-Rosseau, during the day, and it is asserted he handed the latter his resignation. The progressive republicans have held a meeting under the presidency of M. Mline. Considerable diversity of opinion was developed. One faction decided to oppose the new cabinet, owing to the presence of M. Millerand in the ministry. The socialist deputies are also at variance regarding the entry of General de Gallifet into the cabinet and a portion of that party has decided to found a new group, to be entitled "revolutionary socialists." Otls Needs Good Stenographers. WASHINGTON, June 24.—There has been a call made by General Otis upon the war department for four expert Spanish court stenographers for service in the Philippine islands. They must be familiar with the Spanish and English languages, able to translate from Spanish into English and from English into Spanish and experts in taking dictation in the Spanish language and transcribing same with typewriters.

DREYFUS' COMING IS IN DOUBT.

Military Officials Are Ignorant Regarding Arrival of the Sfax.

BREST, France, June 24.-The inhabitants of this port are absorbed in the pending arrival of Dreyfus. The question on every one's lips it, "When will be arrive?" but no one seems able to reply. The town, however, seems perfectly calm. Along the favorite parade, the Cours Dajot, on the cliff | Provisions-Mess pork, per bbl., $7.50 overlooking the splendid harbor, in which half a dozen picturesque old three-deckers are lying moored alongside modern cruisers, were a few groups of sailors and marines gazing seaward.

When questioned they admitted that they were watching for the French cruiser Sfax, bound from French Guiana with the famous prisoner on board, but in the same breath expressed the belief that it would not arrive in the daytime. They think the warship will be kept outside the harbor until night and that then Dreyfus will be landed inside the arsenal. This is the general opinion of the townspeople, who are eager to witness the landing.

The military and civil authorities profess to know nothing about the matter, not even if the Sfax is coming to Brest.

A representative of the Associated Press called at the maritime prefecture this aftrnoon and had a conversation with the port admiral, Barrera, who was typical of French politeness, but who displayed most praiseworthy ignorance. He said:

"Up to now I have received absolutely no instructions. I am awaiting orders from the new minister of marine. I cannot even say Dreyfus will be landed here. In any case, he cannot arrive yet," and, taking a map. he traced the course of the Sfax from the Cape Verde islands, which it left Tuesday, adding:

"You see it cannot have passed the Canary islands before yesterday. It will not arrive here at the earliest until Sunday, or perhaps Monday." The perfect of police also told the Associated Press representative that he had not received any instructions regarding Dreyfus. The French first class cruiser Tage, now lying in the harbor, has been instructed to put to sea on Sunday evening, and it is thought it has been ordered to meet the Sfax and have Dreyfus transferred to it. But Admiral Barrera says the Tage is simply going to sea for the purpose of experimenting with carrier pigeons. No doubt a big crowd wil be present to witness the landing of Dreyfus if he is allowed to be seen, but no disorders are expected.

A detachment of secret police has arrived here from Paris and has been distributed about the town.

OXNARD ANSWERS HAVEMEYER.

Denies Many of His Statements-Agrees With Him on Few Points.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 24.-Henry T. Oxnard, president of the American Beet Sugar Producers' association, has prepared a reply to H. O. Havemeyer's recent argument before the industrial commission at Washington. He fiatly denies many of Mr. Havemeyer's statements and accuses that gentleman of seeking to destroy the American beet sugar industry in order to foster the refineries that handle foreign raw material, besides attempting to divert | provinces of Puerto Principe and Sanpublic attention from the Sugar trust by attacking the tariff.

In conclusion Mr. Oxnard says: "I will not dispute Mr. Havemeyer's claim that 10 per cent is sufficient protection to the sugar refining interests that he cannot make the American people believe that the industries of this country and business prospered during the years we were struggling under the Wilson law, when the average protection amounted to 40 per cent ad valorem. If Mr. Havemeyer had said that keen and losing competition in business led to the formation of trusts he would be right, for the tariff has nothing to do with the formation of trusts."

PAYING OFF THE CUBANS.

Very Small Proportion Will Refuse Share Uncle Sam's Bounty.

HAVANA, June 26.-Brigadier General Randall has paid, up to date, in the provinces of Hayana and Pinar del Rio and the western half of Matanzas province, 3,260 Cuban troops. This raises the full number, exclusive of tiago, to about 4.500. If the same ratio is maintained in the two latter provinces, as the original lists stand, the figures will reach a total of 12,000. The additional pay rolls will probably add 10,000 names, 50 per cent of which which he represents, but I do assert | are likely to receive payment. The present rolls contain 39,000 men, not counting the supplemental lists of the officers paid. It is believed that not 1 per cent will refuse to come forward for payment. A prominent Havana club was the scene of a disturbance last night between two well known Cubans, and several American officers, all of whom had been drinking. The Cubans began cursing the American administration, President McKinley, the United States troops and their officers, Finally one of the Americans, thoroughly out of patience, struck a Cuban in the face. The latter demanded a duel but the officer laughed at him. The Cuban, in a perfect fury, called for a gun and said he would shoot his assailant anyway. At this juncture a party of Americans and Cubans interfered and sent the disturbers about their business. An hour later some Cubans returned and began demanding satisfaction, but the Americans had left the club. The Cubans involved are prominent in local society, but have no political science. They are chronic disturbers of order.
