For 47 Years a Railroad Conductor.
Early this fall the management of the B. & O. R. R. decided that the uniform force should be provided with service stripes, and on the winter uniforms each man has one or more gold stripes on his right sleeve if he has been in the service for five or more years. The gold stripe stands for five years continuous employment by the company and a glance over the list develops an interesting and instructive condition of affairs.

The ordinary man, in a peaceful and uneventful vocation, is seldom in continuous service for forty years, yet on the B. & O. R. R. there is a hale and heartily old man, with keen, undimmed eyes, and a springy step that has been in the continuous employ of the company for 50 years and is still better than many men half his age.

W. H. Green is his name, but everybody on the line calls him "Captain Harry" and he has a record that any man, in any station in life, would be more than proud of.

Captain Green is probably the oldest passenger conductor in the world. If he is not he has the best record, for not once has he been suspended from duty for any cause whatever. And then, too, he has never been injured. Green was born on September 12, 1827, in Cockeysville, Baltimore county, Md., and entered the B. & O. service March 3, 1850, as a freight brakeman. He was promoted in two years to freight conductor and in 1857 was given a passenger train and has served in that capacity ever since. He is now running through trains between Baltimore and Cumberland, Md., and wears ten service stripes on his right arm.

For many years B. & O. train employes have had an enviable reputation for politeness to passengers and attention to duty, and the adoption of the service stripe system will give the traveling public an opportunity to recognize long and faithful service.

NO USE TO GARGLE THROATS.

Physicians Say That the Liquid Reaches Only to the Middle of the Tongue.

One of the most cherished tenets of the household school of medicine is that gargling with a mixture of vinegar and water is good for a sore throat. Now come physicians with their cold science to say not only that the vinegar and water is useless, but that the whole idea of gargling is ineffective. In brief, they say that gargling is of no utility, because not a drop of the liquid used ever gets further than the middle of the tongue. They appear to be able to prove this statement. The whole therapeutic value of gargling depends on whether the fluid used reaches the mucous membrane of the pharynx and tonsils or not. The scientists who have been testing the matter declare that a liquid cannot reach the tonsils or back of the throat because the air is expelled by the lungs in the effort of gargling as well as the shape assumed by the velum, throws the liquid away from the very parts it is supposed to reach. The experiments which have demonstrated the inutility of gargling were made by Dr. Sanger of Munich, and have since been confirmed by other investigators. The tonsils of a patient were painted with methylene blue, a very soluble dye, which gives an intense color. The patient was then given a glass of plain distilled water and was instructed to gargle with it. When the water which the patient ejected from his mouth was examined it was found to be absolutely colorless. A glance at the patient's tonsils showed that they were as blue as ever. Then another and more exact experiment was decided upon. When starch is touched by iodine it immediately turns a bright color. A portion of the tongue, velum and tonsils of the patient were therefore dusted over with wheat flour, which is rich in starch, and he was then given a weak solution of iodine to gargle. This proceeding meant that if any of the liquid which the patient was using as a gargle touched the wheat flour it would immediately color it blue. When the patient had used all the gargle his mouth was examined. It was found that the velum and tongue bore the blue reaction of the iodine, showing that the flour had been reached by the liquid, but on the tonsils the flour had neither been colored nor washed away. — New York Journal.

One Use for Cigarettes.

At last the cigarette habit has been put to a useful purpose, and if the example is followed, the evil may in time be, to some extent, palliated. The credit of the discovery belongs to a young married woman of Washington, who revealed her method to a reporter of the Star. "You see," said she, "I would rather Ned didn't smoke at all, but so long as he does, I prefer cigarettes, and stipulate that he shall roll them himself. It's the only way I can get my errands done for me down town or even make him remember to pay the gas bill on the last day before the discount is off. Now, when Ned starts out in the morning I take his package of cigarette paper and write memoranda on them in pencil. If it is stuff from the greengrocer's, I make a list on the top paper of the pack, and he is sure to see it about the time he gets to the corner, and he goes in and leaves the order. If I want him to telephone Alice to come to luncheon, I note the fact about three papers down, and he is sure to get the message soon after reaching the office. When I have anything I want him to run and attend to at noon, I put a memorandum on the sixth paper, and he is certain to read it just as he is coming back to the office from his luncheon. And if it is something I want brought home for dinner, I only need to write "bread" or "beefsteak," or whatever it is, on the tenth paper, and it comes home promptly. I tell you there is nothing like executive ability when it comes to managing your husband."

The inference is that the husband will in time relinquish the cigarette habit.

They Don't Like Tin Snappers.
Seeing a cart load of tin chippings being taken into one of London's largest hotels, the writer inquired the reason. "We use it for rats," the porter replied. "The hotel rat is bigger, bolder and wiser than any other. He laughs at traps, fattens on poison, and the killing or chasing of dogs, cats or ferrets is his pet diversion. Even when energetic measures have rid us of the pests they are with us again in greater force within a day or two. They will tunnel through anything. Filling the holes with broken glass was considered a good scheme until we found that with marvelous patience they removed the glass piece by piece. But we think we've beaten them now. With this tangled-up tin we cover all places where the beasts are likely to enter our cellars. They can't chew it, and they can't carry it away as they do broken bottles, for when Mr. Rat takes hold of a single strip of the tin he finds it an inseparable part of a network weighing many pounds."
