Reception and Banquet.

The reception and banquet tendered the young ladies of the "Awl-Os" club by the young men of the "Farte Sans Dire" club in Masonic hall, last evening, was as to detail and particular one of the swellest and most charming social functions ever attempted in our city. Everything was on a scale elaborate and generous, and altogether quite unprecedented and most engaging.

Carriages called for and returned to their homes all the guests of the evening -about thirty in number. A committee of the F. S D. club in full evening attire escorted the guests from and to the carriages and welcomed the young ladies to their function.

No special plans were laid for entertaining the young ladies, the period before the banquet being utilized in exploiting the social side of life, and the time following the banquet in tripping the light fantastic.

The reception-room was decorated with ferns, palms and flowering potted plants in profusion, and furnished with everything conducive to comfort and appealing to the love of the beautiful. The ceiling decoration was done in ribbons of the "Awl-Os" club colors-white and yellow-and throughout all the rooms and decorations these colors predominated, making a most enchanting effect. Frappe was served in the reception-room throughout the evening, Mrs. L'Roy

Allen presiding. The banquet-hall was also decorated in white and yellow, and the ladies serving were gowned in white. The tables were beautifully laid in white and yellow-immaculate napery, daintiest Haviland, rare fancy-work and the mellow for Santa Ana, Calif., Thursday night on beams of electricity making a scene 3, to make their home there. truly enrapturing. A large and beautiful boquet of white carnations and yellow jonquils ornamented the center of each table and a flower of each kind was laid at each lady's plate. The six-course banquet spread was a gastronomic dream, and was served by Band 2 of the Dorcas society with much taste and cleverness; it was on a plan unusually elaborate and stylish. Handsome souvenir menu cards were given the guests.

It is admitted by those wise on the subject that the question of speed in railway travel reduces itself to a question of safety and that the development of the railway in the immediate future will be along lines of increased safety rather than greater engine power. There must be better road-beds, less dangerous crossings, better guarded tracks etc. It is quite certain that any of the late and improved passenger engines can attain and maintain a speed of 100 miles an hour—indeed, the "Q" in 1899 claimed to have covered two miles over its roadbed in the state of Illinois at the speed sume the publication of "The Crucifixion of 130 miles an hour. And yet no railroad for great distances attempts to maintain an average of 60 miles an hour for its average trains, notwithstanding the fact that the best engines of the day are capable of doing 70 or 80 miles an For cane and millet seed and hog mil- hour. Burlington officials deny that their company intends to build to Salt Lake City or any Utah point, but the fact remains that surveys have been run from western terminals of the company to J. K. Couzins was up from Lincoln, Ogden via Evanston. Whether these surveys have been run for the Burlington Brakeman Lou Watson and Lew Lyons or for some other company is not known, but shrewd railroaders hazard the guess W. S. Perry was over the Western that if tracks are put down on the line division, last week, with the bridge of surveys the Burlington company will have more or less to do with the management of the road. Further than this it is known that a party of Burlington surveyors were recently sent to a point in Wyoming to do some work. Other parties have been at work in Northern Wyoming for some time, but this is explained by the fact Trainmaster and Mrs. Web Josselyn that the Toluca-Cody City branch will

"The Burlington will contract in a few days for the construction of about 300 miles of road from Guernsey, in the eastern part of the state, to the Elk mountains coal fields in the southern central part of Wydming. Despite the denials of the Burlington officials, the information comes from a reliable sourse that it is the intention of this company to build to the Pacific coast at once. The line has been surveyed across Wyoming to Utah, and this contract will be followed by the awarding of others. The road has been completed to within a few miles of Guernsey. It is stated that an Omaha firm will get the contract for the 300 miles extension."
