Her Own Selection.
Through oceans of remnants and ribbons the puffing big woman towed the meek little man.
"What in the world shall I send her, John?" she blustered. "Come, suggest something that would please Aunt Betsy. Something inexpensive. Why don't you say something?"
"Stationery, books or workboxes," suggested the meek little man.
"Nothing of the kind. You couldn't select a present for the ashman. I will look at some of those fancy boxes of soap."
They were before the soap counter, and she had her finger on an elaborate box containing six round cakes of white soap.
"Fancy and perfumed!" she said, lifting a cake. "The very thing that would please her the most. You may wrap that up, miss."
"But, my dear," protested the meek little man.
"You just keep quiet. I don't care for any suggestions from a person without taste."
"Really?"
"Keep quiet, John Tenbrook!"
It seemed as if her voice had penetrated every corner of the great store, and the little man shrank away in mortification.

"Well, John, what did she say about the little gift? Something nice, I know."
"She returned it."
"What?"
"Yes; you will find a note in the box."
She unfolded the missive and read: "Nice—I return the box of shaving soap. I am a little too old to appreciate the joke of being called the 'Bearded Lady.' Your Aunt Betsy."—Chicago News.

Fate of Old Overcoats.
"Where do the old overcoats go?" is a query that is a natural successor to the old riddle, "Where do the flies go in winter?" The old overcoats seem somehow to fade away, no one knows just how. The overcoat starts its career on the back of its owner, who paid $45 for it. It keeps him warm and shelters him from cold winds and from storms until it commences to get frayed at the edges and the pockets are torn down the sides. Then the owner uses the coat for rainy days only, and no more does he take it to call on his fiancée or to recline on the back of a chair while he is reading at the club. He keeps it another summer, and the moths get into it, and when he takes it out in the fall it has holes here and there. So the owner gives it to the janitor, if the janitor is not a cold, haughty man, and the janitor wears it awhile until his wife gives it to the tramp who wheeled out the three barrels of ashes. The tramp wears it until the old coat commences to fall apart. Then he gives it to another tramp, and it falls apart still more. And then some day the coat has entirely disappeared. No one knows how or when. The coat just simply faded away. That's all anybody knows about it.—Chicago Tribune.

Trying to Keep Out.
A sick man who was really near to death could not resist the temptation to have a little fun with his spiritual adviser. He had a lingering malady, but his days were certainly numbered by a few weeks at the most. He had not been known as a man of strong religious convictions, and yet there was little if anything which could be said against him. It was one of those delicate cases in which it is hard for the minister to do anything. Some one suggested to Rev. Paul Weyand, then stationed at Morningside, that he make a call upon the patient.
Going to the house, he found the man propped up in bed to relieve a smothering sensation. The sick man could scarcely talk above a whisper, and Rev. Mr. Weyand began to make subtle inquiries about his spiritual welfare. The invalid's answers were all non-committal and evasive, and finally in despair the pastor asked:
"Do you really want to go to heaven, Mr. Blank?"
"Do I want to go to heaven?" repeated the dying man in a hoarse whisper. "Why, that's the place I've been fighting so hard to keep out of for the last two years!"—Pittsburg News.

Met on a Screen.
One of the happiest uses served by that wonderful and many named invention, the moving picture machine, appears in a story told in the London Music Hall.
A party of gentlemen were watching the pictures when in one of the South African scenes they recognized an officer friend. The wife of the officer, on being told of this, wrote to the manager and asked that this picture might be put on on a certain evening when she would purposely journey from Glasgow.
She had not seen her husband for over a year, but at last observed him in a group on the screen of a cinematograph.

Too Strong a Temptation.
"Yes, George asked me how old I would be on my next birthday."
"The impudent fellow! Of course you said 19?"
"No; I said 20."
"Mercy, girl, you ain't but 24!"
"No, but George is going to give me a cluster ring with a diamond in it for every year."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

First Need.
"What ten books would you take if you had to pass the rest of your life on a desert island?"
"Oh, I wouldn't take books at all; I'd take things to eat."—Exchange.

Remembered Whole Books.
Walter Savage Landor carried his library in his head. When he had read a book, he always gave it away on principle, having, as he said, observed that with such a purpose in his mind he was sure to retain of a book all that was worth keeping. In his old age Landor was furious if he did not at once remember any passage of a book or any name or date.

Forever Settled.
She—I tell you the moral superiority of woman is recognized in the language itself. There isn't any feminine for "rascals," is there?
He—Of course not, but that's because—
She—That's because there are no feminine rascals!—Chicago Tribune.

The Deer's Eyes.
A Canadian hunter tells this incident of how he once came face to face with his quarry and hadn't the heart to fire: "It wasn't a case of 'buck fever,' such as a novice might experience, for I had been a hunter for many years, and had killed a good many deer. This was a particularly fine buck that I had followed for three days. A strong man can run any deer to earth in time, and at last I had my prey tired out. From the top of a hill I sighted him a few miles away. He had given up the fight, and had stretched himself out on the snow. As I stalked him, he changed his position and took shelter behind a bowlder, and, using the same bowlder for a shelter, I came suddenly face to face with him. He didn't attempt to run away, but stood there looking at me with the most piteous pair of eyes I ever saw."
"Shoot? I could have no more shot him than I could have shot a child. Had the chance come from a distance of 100 yards, I would have shot him down and carried his antlers home in triumph, but once having looked into those eyes it would have been nothing less than murder. I have hunted deer since then, but I find the sport affords me little pleasure. Whenever I draw a bead, the picture of those mute, appealing eyes comes before me, and, though it has not prevented me from pulling the trigger, I have always felt glad somehow when my bullet failed to find its mark."—Washington Post.

How Lithuanians Play Dice.
A peculiar dice game is indulged in by the gambling element of Lithuanians in Baltimore.
Gathering about the dice tables in the saloons kept by their fellow countrymen they quickly lose all interest in everything outside of that which is transpiring upon the cloth before them. As they sit or stand about the tables the careworn features of old men contrast strongly with the ruddy faces of the youths. The eagerness with which the players seek the numbers upon the falling pieces is wolfish in its intensity. Comparatively small sums are placed upon the game, and side bets run from 5 cents to $1.

Although resembling in the manner in which it is operated the high dice game as played by the Anglo-Saxon races, the dice of the Lithuanians, instead of numbering from 1 to 6, run from 1 to 10, the numbering of the six sides being 1, 2, 3, 4, 8, 10. The game is played with four pieces, and a possible 40 is the point striven for instead of 24, which is high mark in the similar American game.—Baltimore Sun.

A Fiend Collector Snubbed.
Collectors of autographs, postcards, etc., are not always conscious of the impertinency of their demands, and the following anecdote, which comes from Trieste, gives a striking example of their failing and of the humorous way in which the intended victim treated his tormentor. An Italian painter received a letter in the following terms:
Dear Sir—I should like to ask you a great favor and hope you will excuse the liberty I take. I am making a collection of painted postcards and should feel myself highly flattered if you would kindly send me one, with a little picture painted on it by yourself. It will certainly be the most treasured card of my collection, as I should be able to say that you were one of the first to honor me in this way. Hoping to receive one, I beg to thank you in advance.
The artist replied:
Dear Sir—I should like to ask you a great favor and hope you will excuse the liberty I take. I am making a collection of thousand franc notes and should feel myself highly flattered if you would kindly send me one, with a little picture painted on it by yourself. It will certainly be the most highly treasured thousand franc note of my collection, as I should be able to say that you were one of the first to honor me in this way. Hoping to receive one, I beg to thank you in advance.

Bread and Cheese.
A couple advanced in years got married lately.
The husband had a room in the house securely locked, the inside of which his wife had never seen, and, being curious as to its contents, she begged again and again to see the room.
At last he consented, and, lo and behold, the room was full of whole cheeses!
He explained matters by telling her that for every sweetheart he had in his young days he bought a cheese.
His wife began to cry.
"Don't cry, dear," he continued. "I've had no sweetheart since I met you."
"It's not that," she replied, still sobbing. "I only wish I had been as thoughtful as you and bought a loaf of bread for every man that kissed me. We could have had bread and cheese enough to last us all our days."—London Tit-Bits.

Wheels and Wheels.
The woman who had been abroad was describing some of the sights of her trip to her friends. "But what pleased me as much as anything," she continued, "was the wonderful clock at Strassburg."
"Oh, how I should love to see it!" gushed the girl in pink. "I am so interested in such things. And did you see the celebrated watch on the Rhine too?"—Kansas City Star.
