Regret.
 Boston Traveler: Young Wife—The new servant girl is a treasure! She is a good cook, is so economical, never goes out and never answers back. Husband—Why didn't I meet her before we were married?

Corn Rotting in Fields.
 Corn is so plentiful in the vicinity of Chelsea, I. T., that the farmers are letting it rot in the fields. Twenty cents a bushel is all they can get for it and they do not think that price pays for harvesting.

To Remove Scorched Spots.
 Here is a valuable recipe which every careful housewife should preserve if she would have beautiful lines. Take the juice of two peeled onions and put into half an ounce of finely cut white castile soap and two ounces of earth from the druggist; mix together and stir in one cup of vinegar; stand over the fire and let it boil thoroughly. Let the mixture cool before using. When lines are badly scorched spread the paste over the brown spot and leave till dry; then wash out the linen after which operation the scorched spot will be found to have disappeared.

Games in Church.
 Catholics pay a penny at St. James' Church, Marylebone, and their wheels are tickled and looked after during services by an attendant. Space for fifty machines has been provided by the Rev. H. B. Hawels, the incumbent, who says the arrangement has been made at the request of numerous cyclists. The Rev. Bernard J. Snell has a room for cycles at Brixton Independent church, and the Rev. W. Carlile at St. Mary-at-Hill, near the monument, also provides safe custody for the cycling worshiper's "bike"—Boston Traveler.

Pocket-Piece of Salt.
 Senator Baker of Kansas, carries a very curious pocket piece. It is a little crystalline cube, about an inch square, as transparent as glass. It is a piece of salt. Underneath the fertile soil of Kansas is the bed of prehistoric ocean. Ages ago the water of the ocean evaporated and left a solid mass of pure salt hundreds of feet under what is now the surface of the earth.

A Curious Plant.
 From the Washington Star: "A curious plant," said an eminent botanist to the writer a day or two ago, "is the wild tamarind, or junbal plant of the riverside and waste places of tropical America, and very strange are its effects upon the non-ruminant animals that feed upon its young shoots, leaves, pods and seeds. It causes horses to lose the hair from their manes and tails, has a similar effect upon mules and donkeys, and reduces pigs to complete madness. Horses are said to recover when fed exclusively on corn and grass, but the new hair is of different color and texture from the old, so that the animal is never quite the same as it was. One animal, of which I personally knew, after feeding on the plant, lost its hoofs and had to be kept in slings until they grew and hardened again. Ruminant animals are not thus affected, and the growth of the plant is thus encouraged in the Bahamas as a fodder plant for cattle, sheep and goats. The difference in its action upon ruminants and non-ruminants is probably due to changes effected upon it in the chewing of the cud."

Electric Fire Engines Economical.
 The chief fire engineer of the New Orleans, La., department has figured out that the relative running cost as between a three-horse hitch engine of the first class and an electric power engine is $60 a month for the former and $27 for the same period for the latter. These figures show a clear gain of $33 per month and $400 per annum in round figures for the electric power engine.

A Wife's Repartee.
 A party of young men were taking dinner a few nights ago at a fashionable cafe, when one of them who is somewhat of a jester called the waiter and said:

"John, go and call Main — on the phone. If a woman answers, it will be my wife. Tell her that I instructed you to say that I am in the police station for a few hours and will not be at home for dinner. Say to her that the possibilities are that I shall not be at home tonight. Understand me, sir?"

John winked a couple of times in a knowing way, bowed deferentially and suggested:

"Supposin'—"

"Supposing nothing, sir! If she asks who is talking, tell her it is the turnkey at the Central station, and she'll never know who told her the lie."

The waiter shuffled away and was presently seen to be having a good deal of fun with himself. The jester inferred that it might have something to do with his case and called him over.

"What's amusing you, John?"

"Wouldn't like to tell you, sir; at least right here."

"I guess these fellows understand. Let 'er go!"

"Missus says to tell her husband she is glad he is so nicely located for the night. She knows where he is for once."—Cleveland Leader.

Wonderful Courage.
 That was a magnificent feat performed by a French regiment when they were fighting the Austrians. It happened a long time ago, but the incident was marked by such superlative valor that it will never be forgotten.

The regiment, under Colonel Walhubert, was sent to take an intrenchment of the Austrians in the heights of the Simplon pass. Arriving at the point, they found the enemy solidly intrenched in what appeared to be an impregnable position. In front of their redoubts and quite separating them from the French force was a deep chasm through which ran a mountain torrent.

How to get across was a problem seemingly impossible to solve. But the colonel was equal to it. He found a long, straight tree with a trunk almost a foot in thickness. This he ordered to be cut down, and the trunk was actually thrust across the chasm under a galling fire. The colonel gave the word to pass over—one man at a time.

The first was shot and pitched down to death in the chasm. The second and third shared his fate, but presently a few succeeded in the desperate attempt. Then the colonel followed, formed the little party on the other side and charged. The enemy, dumfounded at such extraordinary bravery, left their position and fled.—Cassell's.

His One Brave Deed.
 She was a hero worshiper. Often she would read history just to find some new hero to worship.

Otherwise she would read such novels as "Beautiful Betsy, the Belle of the Brassworks; or, The Baronet's Bride."

Of course this made her feel that she had married beneath her, for her husband had not grown round shouldered from wearing heavy medals.

Occasionally she would tell him that she wished he was a hero.

Once the foolish man told her that he would be a hero if he had a chance.

"You would?" she said in tones of incredulity. "Did you ever do anything in your life that looked like bravery or that seemed valorous in after years?"

He thought of the day when they played Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" and he gave the minister $10 and she became his wife.

But he didn't say anything about it. For a true hero never talks about his glorious, daring deeds.

So she never knew that her husband was a hero.

Isn't it a sad, sad story?—Baltimore American.

Loyalty.
 A Durham collier recently took unto himself a wife whose friends had done their utmost to dissuade her from marrying, but without success.

Meeting her one day some months after her marriage, a friend remarked: "Hello, Bess! Yer look right bad! Has 'e been a-thumping yer? I knowed what it would be, but yer would have 'im. Everybody said Bob 'ud mak' a fitball of yer!"

"Then everybody was wrong!" snapped the ill used wife. "We've been married this eight months, and I ain't a-going to say we had no little shindies, but to give our Bob 'is due I will say as 'e ain't had to use 'is foot yet. So there!"—Exchange.

Her Base Ingratitude.
 When Duchenois, the great French actress, died, some one met an old man who had been her intimate friend and who was apparently crushed with sorrow. Kindly meant professions of sympathy and consolation failed to cheer him. "For," said he, "it is not so much her loss which troubles me as her base ingratitude. Can you credit it? She left me nothing in her will, and yet I dined with her at her own house three times a week regularly for 30 years!"

Little Interruptions.
 "My boy," said the first proud papa, "has a bad habit of interrupting me when I'm talking. Your kid isn't old enough for that yet."

"No," replied the other. "My boy contents himself with interrupting me when I'm sleeping."—Philadelphia Press.

How Codfish Catch Lobsters.

It is probably news to the majority of people to know that the red, or rock, codfish is a bitter enemy of the lobster that has just crawled out of its shell and is soft and unable to protect himself. During shedding time these lobsters crawl up under projecting rocks, where the seaweed and kelp are thick and where they find protected places in which to go through the process of slipping out of their old shells and taking on a new coat of mail, so to speak. For some days after shedding the lobsters are weak and unable to cope with those fish that wage war upon them. This fact the codfish seem intuitively to know, and they will swarm around these retreats in great numbers and wait for the shedders to crawl out.

An old lobster fisherman said that many times he had stopped his dory over a large number of these red codfish and watched their operations. He had even dropped his line down and dangled tempting bait within a few feet of them. Unless it happened to fall directly in front of their noses, however, they would seldom take it, as they were after lobster meat. When the thin shelled lobsters would crawl out from beneath the protecting seaweed, the codfish would dart at them and strike them fierce blows with their tails, disabling them completely. They would then fall to and devour the helpless crustaceans. This performance, the lobster fisherman said, he had witnessed many times.—Lewiston Journal.

His Looks Were Deceptive.

The late Mr. Justice William O'Brien, as is pretty generally known, was not a tailor's model, and when going on a long railway journey his attire was even more neglected than usual, says London M. A. P. Waiting one day for his train to leave Cork, he wandered into the first class refreshment room, his threadbare and faded coat looking the more remarkable when in contrast with the dress of the smart set frequenting the place. "Can I have a glass of milk?" he inquired of the being in frills and powder who ruled behind the bar.

The lady eyed him sharply and superciliously and then snapped out: "Yes, but it's tuppence a glass here. You'll get it for a penny in the third class room."

"Well," returned the judge as amiably as possible, "I think I'll have a glass at 'tuppence' all the same. I can manage to survive the expense."

He took his milk and walked out with an unruined countenance. But when that young lady heard from some gentlemen who were standing at the bar and knew the judge who her customer was she didn't feel very well. She tried to explain that she thought he was one of those "old farmer fellows who'd stop arguing about the price of the milk for half an hour."

The Bontswain's Judgment.

It was somewhere in this wide, wide world, just where has slipped my mind, and they were about to buy beef on hoof for the ships. So the officer whose duty it is to make the purchase took ashore with him the bo's'n, as representing the crew, to look over the animals and either object or not. They approached the first animal.

"How will that do?" asked the officer.

The bo's'n cautiously approached the beast, bent down and gingerly ran his thumb and forefinger down first one shank and then the other until the whole four shanks had been examined. Straightening up he said:

"He'll do all right, sir."

The officer, flabbergasted, cried: "But, dash it all, you can't tell the good points of a bullock by the shanks!"

"Perhaps not, sir, but they're the only parts we ever gets, sir," was the reply.—Pall Mall Gazette.

His Accent.

One day Lord Morris was sitting at the Four Courts as lord chief justice of Ireland when a young barrister from the north rose nervously to make his first motion. The judge had declared that no one listening to himself would ever take him for anything but an Irishman, which was perfectly correct. But Galway could not understand Antrim. The lord chief justice leaned over to ask the associate where the barrister hailed from.

"County Antrim," was the response. Then asked his lordship of the official, "Did ye ever come across sich a frightful accent in the course of yer loife?"

Gaslight on Gems.
 The appearance of all fine gems is improved by gaslight. A perfect emerald, despite its color, which in anything else would turn to a dull gluish hue, is only intensified in brilliancy of color by artificial light. The blue sapphire, though darkened, remains true to its color, as by daylight. The alexandrite is the only gem that changes, turning from a dark olive to a brilliant blood red by candle or gas light.

No Difference.
 English Customer (to manager of restaurant)—I see, Signor Maraschino, that the American gentleman and his wife, who have just left, drank nothing but water with their dinner. Does that make much difference in their bill?

Signor Maraschino—Notting, sir. They pay same as yourself and lady, who 'ave champagne; otherwise 'ow should we live?—London Punch.

An Odd Slip.

Dr. Johnson once met the village postman trudging along the dusty road on a hot summer afternoon. The postman observed that he had still a mile to walk just to deliver one newspaper.

"My goodness," exclaimed the sympathetic doctor, "I'd never go all that distance for such a trifle! Why don't you send it by post?"

A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED

At Panama, Colombia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Dr. Chas. H. Utter, a prominent physician, of Panama, Colombia, in a recent letter states: "Last March, I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age who had a very bad attack of dysentery. Everything prescribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were sure she would die. She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed. What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better; inside of three days she was upon her feet and at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale by McConnell & Berry, Druggists.
