Republican Convention.

The Republicans of the state of Nebraska are hereby called to meet in convention, at the Auditorium in the city of Lincoln, on Wednesday, June 18, 1902, at 10 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following offices, to be voted for at the next general election, to be held in the state of Nebraska, November 4, 1902, viz: One governor, one lieutenant governor, one secretary of state, one auditor of public accounts, one treasurer, one superintendent of public instruction, one attorney general, one commissioner of public lands and buildings, and for the transaction of such other business as may regularly come before the meeting.

The basis of representation of the several counties in said convention shall be the vote cast for Hon. Samuel H. Sedgwick for judge of the supreme court, at the regular election held on November 5, 1901, giving one delegate for each 100 votes or major fraction thereof, no cast for the said Samuel H. Sedgwick, and one delegate-at-large for each county. Said apportionment entitles the following counties to the following representation in said convention:

Furnas	12	Gosper	4
Red Willow	8	Frontier	8
Hitchcock	5	Hays	5
Dundy	4	Chase	4

It is recommended that no proxies be allowed in said convention, but that the delegates present should be authorized to cast the full vote of the county represented by them.

Notice is hereby given that each of the old numbered senatorial districts in the state is to select a member of the state committee to serve for the term of two years.

By order of the state committee.
H. C. LINDSAY, Chairman.
JOHN T. MALLABRE, Secretary.

Republican County Convention.

The Republicans of Red Willow county are hereby called to meet in convention in the city of McCook on Saturday, May 24th, at 10 o'clock in the morning, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following offices to be voted for at the next general election, to be held in the state of Nebraska, on the 4th day of November, 1902, viz: One county attorney, one county judge, one representative of the 6th legislative district, one commissioner, first district, eleven delegates to the Republican state convention, eleven delegates to the Republican congressional convention of the 5th congressional district of the state of Nebraska, and for the transaction of such other business as may regularly come before said convention.

The basis of representation of the several precincts in said county shall be the vote cast for O. L. Thompson for judge of the county court, in the year 1901, allowing one delegate for each five votes or fraction thereof cast for said O. L. Thompson, and two delegates at large for each of the following precincts in said county. Said apportionment entitles the several voting precincts in said county to the following representation in said convention:

There is plenty of room in Nebraska politics for men who are patriotic enough to be honest and fair, and who are courageous enough to be lone-some.

The supreme court of Nebraska has just rendered a decision in the case of The State of Nebraska ex rel Cyrus E. Watson, deputy labor commissioner, plaintiff, vs. Laurence N. Eskew, assessor, defendant, sustaining the law requiring assessors to gather statistics. The syllabus of the court passes upon the matter of compensation by stating that for the time during which an assessor renders bona fide services he is entitled to $3 per day, and county boards exceed their authority when they undertake to reduce compensation defined by law.

Former Nebraskans, Iowans, and South Dakotans

now residing in Seattle, Washington, and have organized "The Iowa-Nebraska South Dakota Club" for the promotion of social and business interests. Harry E. Wilson and O. B. Thorgrimson, Nebraska boys and law partners, are respectively secretary and vice-president for Nebraska, and present headquarters are in the secretary's office, 405 1/2 Washington building, Seattle. The club is at present actively cooperating with Moran Bros., the shipbuilders, and the Seattle chamber of commerce in making provision for a proper celebration of the laying of the keel of the great battleship Nebraska, July 4th, when Governor Savage and his staff are to be present.

Are you going to send away, this year, and pay more for seeds than the Bee Hive is selling them for?

Send Me Their Names.

Send me the addresses of your friends who might be induced to move to Nebraska and I will mail them our new 48-page book descriptive of Nebraska's agricultural resources and its unbounded opportunities. The book is illustrated with Nebraska farm scenes, and is supplemented with a sectional map of the state. It will help bring home-seekers to Nebraska.—5-30. J. FRANCIS, Gen. Pass. Ag't, Omaha, Neb.

In the Restaurant.

One enters the restaurant through glass doors, from the street level. A swinging sign, croaking in the high wind that swirls through the city's streets, and great letters of gold emblazoned on the window invite the passer's attention. The room is deep and narrow. In the front end is a hollow square of glass show-cases filled with elaborately frosted cakes, fruits temptingly displayed and various works of culinary art. Behind the counter stands the cashier, at the nickled register, and by his hand a spindle on which the checks are skewered as they are passed to him.

We are met by a short, well-built young man with the physiognomical characteristics of a German, fair complexion, the blue eyes, the flaxen hair, but we overhear him tell two ladies, who imagine they see in him some resemblance to an acquaintance of theirs that he is a native of Louisville. We are conducted down the long room set with tables filled with chattering crowds of diners, to the farther end, where he places chairs for us at a marble-topped table without a cloth, and littered with the remains of a repast of which a party of men, who are but just leaving, have partaken. A waiter removes the dirty dishes and the crumpled napkins and wipes the top of the table. As we hang our hats and coats upon the hook against the wall we observe a sign that informs us the management will not be responsible for articles that may be lost or stolen. An atmosphere permeated with odor of baking bread pervades the place. The walls are done in a rich red with gold tracings, and are hung with engravings and paintings. We have not time to see more before a tall and rather pretty waitress in black dress and white apron hands us the bill of fare and napkins, and after filling our glasses with water, waits for our orders. Is there anything more puzzling than a bill of fare? It is long and closely printed yet in the variety of dishes one finds but a limited few for which he thinks he cares. At length we make our choice and the waitress scurries away to fill our orders.

Then we have a few moments to look about and take note of our surroundings. We observe for the first time, that two other people are seated at our table, a handsome, dark man, scrupulously attired, with black VanHorn beard, his companion a young girl. We are surprised to discover that the man is a foreigner, a German, we decide from his accent, a polished, cultured gentleman, all courtesies and smiles, one evidently from the higher circles who speaks splendid English, with a rare choice of words, but without facility, that renders his constructions faulty. One unwittingly turns eavesdropper and learns that the girl is about to take a journey, for he asks her, "Ven do you away go?" You strain your ears to catch the answer, but there is a clatter of dishes and noise of conversation, and the young lady replies in too low a voice for you to hear. You become intensely interested in these people whom you have not met before and who, when the meal is over, walk out of your life never to enter it again.

He orders for himself and her a plate of baked ham and cabbage, a piece of roast beef, potatoes German-fried, for two a bottle of milk and a cup of cocoa in the same calm, well modulated tone, with the same air of inimitable dignity and refinement that marked his every utterance to the girl. When you have an opportunity, without being observed, you glance at the young lady, a girl, you say, of sixteen, tall and slender, of German descent, but American born, stupid, you believe, not quick to think, not pretty either, yet not without composure, grace of carriage, modest and retiring, not well, though not conspicuously ill-dressed, showing lack, not of means, but of taste. You wonder what relation exists between the two, they are not father and daughter. Perhaps she is his niece, but nothing that is overheard will justify the conclusion.

You wonder where her journey will take her. Ah, here's the clue: "Will you go to London?" No, not to London. To Paris, perhaps? Not to Paris, either. "To Berlin, then?" Yes, they are going to Berlin. And one wonders who the others are. He will not be one of them, for he knows little even about their movements. He tells her of "ze trip down ze Rhine, zat is so beautiful," with graceful gestures and refined enthusiasm. How strikingly different is his manner from the manner of the number of American business men seated at an adjoining table, the sound of whose noisy conversation and boisterous laughter, whose uncouth, flippant ways intrude themselves upon us.

The light that filters through the stained-glass windows is not sufficient to dispel the gloom of the place. Artificial lights in plenty, the dazzling arc lamps, the yellow incandescents, blaze from the ceiling. A bronze reproduction of the Venus of Milo stands in a niche. Why is it we always think of the origin of this statue as a woman without arms? On the wall opposite hangs a painting—a foreign scene—a bit of an old orchard, a flowering apple tree in the foreground, a stone fence, the highway, a lady and a little girl beneath the tree, a peasant woman trudging along the road with a bundle of wood on her head, and a child tugging at her skirts.

When the waitress brings their orders our friend helps his lady in much the same manner that he might a queen. For desert he orders strawberries and cream. He sprinkles her berries with sugar and pours on the cream. He urges her to permit him to put more sugar on them. She insists that they are sweet enough, but when she begins to eat she finds them sour and she reaches for the sugar herself. He laughs good humorously. He makes polite inquiry concerning the health and welfare of certain common friends. He speaks of social functions in which it seemed she had taken part. We are sorry to see them finish their meal and prepare for their departure.

When they are done he calls for the checks. He helps her on with her coat. They walk away and in a moment are lost to us forever in the crowd.

Caution.

This is not a gentle word—but when you think how liable you are to purchase, for the only remedy universally known and a remedy that has had the largest sale of any medicine in the world since 1866 for the cure and treatment of consumption and throat lung troubles without losing its great popularity all these years, you will be thankful we called your attention to Rosche's German Syrup. There are so many ordinary cough remedies made by druggists and others that are cheap and good for light colds, but for severe coughs, bronchitis, croup—and especially for consumption, where there is difficult expectoration and coughing during the nights and mornings, there is nothing like German Syrup, sold by all druggists, is the civilized world.

A Gem of Its Kind.

Concerning Ed Amherst Ott, dean of Drake University College of Oratory and English, Des Moines, Iowa, will deliver the address on class day, President A. O. Thomas of the Central Nebraska Educational association says: "Ed Amherst Ott delivered his inspiring lecture, 'Sour Grapes,' before the session of the Central Nebraska Educational Association just closed at Kearney, and completely captivated the large audience assembled to hear him. It is the unanimous expression of those who heard it that this lecture is one of the very finest ever delivered before the teachers of the state. Splendid in its delivery, sparkling in its humor, and rich in its truths, it inspired every one who heard it. It is the gem of its kind. Mr. Ott is a strong man, and will please and inspire his audience wherever he goes. This lecture should be given in every section of the state."

Home for Families of Bandits.

Not actuated by remorse, but by pure philanthropy, Jim Jenkins, hunter of outlaws, has concluded to devote all his money to the maintenance of a home for the orphans and widows of men he has run to earth, in particular, and of criminals of the great Southwest in general. Jim Jenkins, now of Kansas, is now 65 years old and has spent forty years as a scout and hunter of bandits and train robbers. In this way he has made about $50,000. Among the distinguished outlaws he has chased were Jesse James and his brother, Bob Ford, Bill Dalton and Bill Cook, while he was the leader of the band that caught Cherokee Bill in 1895. In the Dalton raid in Coffeyville, Kas., Jenkins was shot eight times. He estimates his bag of bad men at about 150. The home, which is being built on a 5,000-acre farm owned by Jenkins, near Pryor Creek, I. T., is to cost $20,000.—Buffalo Express.

Dog Will Wag the Tail.

A special to a Chicago paper from New York contains the following information: "J. J. Hill, the railroad king, is quoted as expressing the belief that the Northern Securities company will lose the case brought against it by the government, and he is preparing a line of retreat. His legal advisers are reported to have informed him that the federal suits will probably be successful, and he therefore must arrange the business of the three railroads involved so that no great damage will be done these properties. According to a close friend of Mr. Hill, who has recently talked with the great railroad manager, it is proposed to make the Burlington system the chief one of the three great railroads. Last winter, the Iowa legislature passed a law under which the Burlington got a new charter. The Burlington will not attempt to absorb the Great Northern or the Northern Pacific, but the last two will work as closely under the direction of the mother system as the charter and the laws of the state will permit. The brains of the management of the three great lines will be vested in the general officers of the Burlington, and the policies and officers of the other lines will be under the control of the officers of that system. Said this authority: Hill will prepare for the great battle which he considers inevitable between the great transcontinental lines of the south and those of the north. In other words, for a war to the death between the Hill and Harriman combines. Hill wants to be in a position to make a big fight for southern and the southwest business for his lines, and to divert much of this to the northern transcontinental lines."

Walks Without Crutches.

"I was much afflicted with sciatica," writes Ed C. Nud, Lowaville, Sedgewick county, Kansas, "going about on crutches and suffering a deal of pain. I was induced to try Ballard's Snow Liniment, which relieved me. I used three 3c bottles. It is the greatest liniment I ever used.
