Republican Convention.

The Republicans of the state of Nebraska are hereby called to meet in convention, at the Auditorium in the city of Lincoln, on Wednesday. June 18, 1902, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following offices, to be votesd for at the next general election, to be held in the state of Nebraska, November 4, 1902, viz: One governor, one lieutenant governor, one secretary of state, one anditor of public accounts, one treasurer, one superintendent of public instruc-tion, one attorney general, one commissioner of public lands and buildings, and for the trans-action of such other business as may regularly come before the meeting.

The basis of representation of the several counties in said convention shall be the vote cast for Hon. Samuel H. Sedgwick for judge of the supreme court, at the regular election held on November 5, 1901, giving one delegate for each 100 votes or major fraction thereof so cast for the said Samuel H. Sedgwick, and one delegate at large for each county. Said apportingment at-large for each county. Said apportionment entitles the following counties to the following representation in said convention:

....12 Gosper...11 Frontier. Hitchcock. 5 Hayes 4
Dundy. 4 Chase. 4
It is recommended that no proxies be allowed in said convention, but that the delegates present thereat be authorized to cast the full vote of the county represented by them. Notice is hereby given that each of the odd numbered senatorial districts in the state is to select a member of the state committee to serve

The strollers say no word, but are silent, contemplative, as they walk.

And, indeed, what better time for contemplation than the night. By day our universe is circumscribed. The blue is confining, shuts us in, limits our view. We cannot see beyond the narrow circumference of the horizon. At night we look into the unfathomable depths of space and see other spheres than ours, spheres so far away the distance between us and them cannot be expressed by any combination of those symbols that have been invented to convey ideas. We look into realms of whose magnificent dimensions we have no conception, and we are lost in wonder and amazement. To this comparatively quiet spot the sound of the city's traffic, the blended discords of the city's varied industries, comes like music of a Wagnerian overture, like the roar of surf upon the beach, like the rumble of incessant thunder, like the mutterings of an earthquake. Above the never ceasing monohears the clanging of bells on cable trains, the jingling of bells on bicycles, the ringing of bells on engines, the deep throated whistles of boats on the lake, the shrieking of factory whistles, the shrill warnings of the automobiles, the escape of steam from exhaust pipes, the creaking mechanism of the horseless carriage, the swish of trolley wires, the rattle of elevated trains, the puffing and steaming and throbbing of locomotives, the tinkle of pianos from apartment buildings, the strains of a waltz from the open windows of a hall where a dance is in progress, a boisterous, roistering college song from a fraternity house, grating foot-falls on the gravel, the croaking of frogs from a rain-filled pond in a neighboring lot. It is too early yet for insects. The birds have been silent
