Special Correspondence.

The past week has been a busy one with the legislature, in spite of the fact that the new revenue bill has not come up for regular discusion. Pending the printing of the bill, which is a long job, one of the typewritten copies was turned over to the regular revenue committee of the house for consideration. The printed bills being now ready, a lively discussion on the floor of the honse is expected this week.

Up to the present time the principal objection to the terms of the new bill comes from stock feeders who want the property ownership date changed from Feb. 1 to March 1, frankly acknowledging that the early date will catch them before they have disposed of a considerable part of their property. There is also some little objection to the assessor system, and one or two members favor the election of the deputy assessors. Some members of the regular revenue committee suggest that the county assessor should be permitted to appoint the deputies without the confirmation of the county commissioners. It is generally believed, however, that the bill if it is passed will be in practically its original

The telephone hearings and investigations have been continued during the week, but it is hard to tell what real progress has been made. The bill permitting independent companies to establish toll stations in the large cities has at last reached the general file and will soon come up for discussion in committee of the whole.

The agitation over the elevator bills has quited down after the hearings before the committee, and the bill has gone to the general file, with an amendment added by the standing committee that the new elevators must have cost at least $3,000 before they can compel the building of a side track. Both sides seem to be well fairly satisfied with this compromise.

There has been some discussion during the week over the Burgess printing bill, and a number of publishers of county newspapers have been in to protest against it. Their argument is that it is not in the interest of the country printers, but on the contrary would do them harm. The hearings have brought out the fact that there is some spite work between city printers involved in the movement to pass the bill.

There are now three bills in for the reduction in the number of judicial districts, differing slightly in the make-up of some of the districts. The intention of each is to cut down the expense in this department by lopping off a number of judges and reporters.

A bill is in the senate for the appointment of a state accountant at a salary of $2,000 a year, whose duty it will be to oversee the systems of book keeping in the various state departments and institutions, and provide for uniformity. Heretofore there has been an entire lack of system in some of the institutions, and without doubt the state has lost much money because of lax methods.

Another senate bill is No. 203, requiring school officers to file an estimate of expenses for the coming year, and making it illegal to use money for purposes other than used in the estimate. The bill is calculated to stop extravagance and misappropriation of funds.

The inevitable joint resolution asking for the dismissal of the suits against the Bartley bondsmen has been presented, and without doubt will provoke much discussion. The bondsmen agree to pay the cost of suit if they are released from paying the judgments. Such a release would enable those of them who have their property covered up to begin to operate again in their own names.

THE HABIT OF LYING.

Ways In Which Prevarication May Be Developed.

How does one become a liar-that is to say, how does the child discover a lie and habitually make use of it? We can admit that at the beginning there is absolute sincerity. The child through all its first years neither lies nor dissimulates. Its sentiments, its desires, translate themselves into words and into acts. Its body is the constant and perfect expression of its inmost being. Such is the starting point-sincerity, absolute transparency,

There is a multitude of little lies tolerated which we treat as pardonable. We tell the domestic to say we are not at home when we are; we compliment people to their faces and criticise them when they are gone; we say we are happy to see some one and directly after speak of having been annoyed. No more is necessary. The example has been given.

We lie to the child himself. We are pressed by his many embarrassing questions and in order to free ourselves from the embarrassment reply with what is frequently a falsehood. Some fine day he discovers the truth, and the evil is done. The gravest case is when ROYAL HIGHLANDERS -- McCook | the child is taken as an accomplice in a lie or when his mother tells him. "Above all, do not tell this to your papa." This is the ruin of all morality.

> The third stage is the first encounter of the child with society, the first shock with social life. The child who tells all he knows, sees and hears, all that he would better have left unsaid, is called the "enfant terrible." His parents do not tell him to lie, but they tell him it is not necessary to tell all he thinks. This is extremely serious, as it teaches the child that he cannot show himself as he is. This is the revelation of the lie obligatory. Above all, among his comrades he quickly learns to dissimulate, because if he is naive-expresses all his joys, pains, desires-they make sport of him; nay, worse, they abuse his confidence; the hopes, projects which he has confided to them he some day sees used against

Thus the impossibility of living without lying is revealed to him. Society excuses certain forms of lying which are inspired by a feeling of politeness, modesty, shame.

The child becomes a liar because all the world about him lies. The distinced by social life and those who have told thus by a Japanese official: habituated themselves to lying more some personal interest.

An important cause in the development of lying in children is the employment of excessive and ill advised punishments. The child who becomes a liar is the one who lives in perpetual terror of reproaches, humiliation or

THE BEST DAY OF ALL.

Two Reasons Why Sunday Always Appeals to the Children.

On weekday mornings father had gone to work when you came downstairs, but on Sunday mornings when you awoke a trifle earlier, if anything-"Father!"

Silence. "Father!" a little louder.

Then a sleepy "Yes."

You waited. Then-

"Father, is it time yet?"

"We want to get up." "It isn't time yet. You children go to sleep."

"No. You children lie still." So you and Lizbeth, wideawake, whispered together, and then, to while away the time while father slept, you played Indian, which required two little yells from you to begin with (when the Indian You arrived in your warpaint) and two big yells from Lizbeth to end with (when the Paleface She was being scalped). Then father said it was "no use," and mother took a hand. You were quiet after that, but it was yawny lying there with the sun so high. You listened. Not a sound came from father and mother's room. You rose cautiously, you and Lizbeth, in your little bare feet. You stole softly across the floor. The door was a crack open, so you peeked in, your face even with the knob and Lizbeth's just below. And then at one and the same instant you both said "Boo!" and grinned, and the harder you grinned the harder father tried not to laugh, which was a sign that you could scramble into bed with him, you on one side and Lizbeth on the other, cuddling down close while mother went to see about breakfast. It was very strange, but while it had been so hard to drowse in your own bed the moment you were in father's you did not want to get up at all. Indeed, it was father who wanted to get up first, and it was you who cried that it was not time.

Weekdays were always best for most things, but for two reasons Sunday was the best day of all. One reason was Sunday dinner. The other was father.-Harper's Magazine.

The story of their origin was

The sun goddess became angry with Adolph Mangless is sick and off duty than society wishes, to lie because of the earth and withdrew into a cave, plunging everything into darkness. The other deities could not induce her to come out, so began to make a noise as of great rejoicing, which aroused the curiosity of the irate goddess. She finally came to the mouth of the cave to learn the cause of the uproar and strokes. The lie for him is a supreme was told that they had found a more beautiful goddess than herself. The sun goddess came out then, demanding to see her rival, and the crafty deities held the mirror before her, which

The "Basin" of an Apple. One end of the apple bears the name of "basin" and contains the remnants of the blossom-sometimes called the eye of the fruit. This part of the apple close of the day his temper was high Is deep in some varieties and shallow and his fish basket empty. Still, there and open in others. This is the weakest point in the whole apple as concerns the question of the keeping quality of the fruit. If the basin is shallow and the canal to the core firmly closed, there is much less likelihood of the fruit decaying than when it is deep, and the evident opening connects the center of the fruit with the surface.

RHEUMATISM GURED AT LAST

Good News For all Who Suffer With Rheumatism .--- Free.

To all who suffer with rheumatism I will gladly send free the wonderful story of how my mother was cured after years of suffering, together with the most elaborate treatise on rheumatism ever published.

No matter what your form of rheumatism is, whether acute, chronic, museular, inflammatory, deformant, sciatic, neuralgia, gout, lumbago, etc.-no matter how many doctors have failed in your case—no matter how many socalled "sure cures" you have tried I want you to write to me and let me tell you how my mother was cured. I am neither a doctor nor a professor

-simply a plain man of business, but I have a cure for rheumatism, and I want to tell everyone who suffers with rheumatism about it. I wish to be clearly understood, and trust that all who suffer with this terrible disease, however apparently beyond the reach of cure, will write to me this day and I will send you by return mail this work of mine. I appeal especially to the "chronically ill" who are wearied and discouraged with doctoring and to those who have been east aside as incurable. All you have thought about rheumatism may be wrong. Let me tell you our experience. Surely, if you have rheumatism or have a suffering friend it will pay you to investigate my offer, anyway, and prove for yourself the claims I make. Send me your address, today-a postal card will do-and I will mail you this wonderful story. If you have any matter where located send me their address, and I will mail them a copy. My
