

TWENTY-THIRD YEAR

MCCOOK, RED WILLOW COUNTY, NEBRASKA, FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 24, 1904.

NUMBER 4

With Frank Roberson in Norway.

The

An appreciative audience went with Frank Roberson through "Norway, the Harvard. Land of the Midnight Sun," in the opera house, Monday night, and every step of the way and incident of the trip was a delight. Mr. Roberson confesses to an ardent love for Norway and its people, and during the several trips he has made to the Norseland, the home of the Vikings, he has secured and preserved a rare lot of pictures which he projects with artistic effects and colorings upon the screen for the delectation of his audience. Much of his address was made up of personal incidents, quite all of it but the brilliant word-pictures which at times come from his lips like an avalanche. Norway does not have the meat that India offers a lecturer, but its general unfamiliarity to the average American gives it added interest. Its quaint, virtuous, simple, honest people, its picturesque costumes and peculiar customs. its beauty and grandeur and exclusiveness of scenery, the Norwegian admiration for America, all make Norway an appealing theme a'd study. And when Frank Roberson "shows you" and tells the story with the skill of an artist and the finish of a traveller of wide experience, you must be obtuse and stupid to fail to be entertained and enlightened. While the audience was quite satisfactory, it was not all it should have been. The opera house should have been crowded. The subject and speaker deserved it. McCook would do herself more credit in a much more liberal patronage of entertainments of this gradeand in withholding some of her excessive admiration of the minstrel sort.
