So far as analysis goes the composition of early morning air is not different from that of air at any other time. It is well to remember. however, that during the passing of night to day and of day to night several physical changes take place. There is a fall of temperature at sunset and a rise again at dawn, and con sequently moisture is alternately being thrown out and taken up again, and it is well known that change of state is accompanied by electrical phenomena and certain chemical manifestations also. The formation of dew has probably therefore far more profound effects than merely the moistening of objects with water.

Dew is vitalizing not entirely because it is water, but because it possesses an invigorating action due partly, at any rate, to the fact that it is saturated with oxygen, and it has been stated that during its formation perox-Wilsey of Curtis, the republican nomi- ide of hydrogen and some ozone are morning air has its origin in this way.

It is doubtful whether any of these explanations is true, the real reason most probably being that the vitalizing dew cannot form upon the grass under a tree, whereas, as a rule, both rain and light can reach it.
