Healthy Mothers.
Mothers should always keep in good bodily health. They owe it to their children. Yet it is no unusual sight to see a mother, with babe in arms, coughing violently and exhibiting all the symptoms of a consumptive tendency. And why should this dangerous condition exist, dangerous alike to mother and child, when Dr. Boschee's German Syrup would put a stop to it at once? No mother should be without this old and tried remedy in the house—for its timely use will promptly cure any lung, throat or bronchial trouble in herself or her children. The worst cough or cold can be speedily cured by German Syrup; so can hoarseness and congestion of the bronchial tubes. It makes expectoration easy, and gives instant relief and refreshing rest to the cough racked consumptive. New trial bottles, 25c; large size, 75c. At all druggists.

PUBLIC FREE LIBRARY NOTES.

The serial publication of Robert Herrick's recent novel, "The Common Lot," has just been finished in the Atlantic. It is a story of a Chicago life by a Chicago author, and for these reasons has more than the usual interest for westerners. The story, while possessing more merit than the average modern novel, is not all that one wishes it were. The book is by no means badly written, and one objects rather to the romantic glow the author has thrown over his characters than to the manner of the presentation of his facts. Perhaps, however, the majority of readers prefer the sacrifice of artistic effect to a happy ending.

The hero of Mr. Herrick's story is an architect, a man whose uncle had gained his fortune in business. The nephew had been given an opportunity to qualify himself for his profession. He expected to be the principal beneficiary under his uncle's will, but the old man, believing he had done his duty by his nephew when he provided him with an education, left the bulk of his immense estate to endow a school for working-men's sons. The young man was keenly disappointed, but did the only thing left for him to do, opened an office and entered energetically upon the practice of his profession. Soon after, he married one who would have been an ideal wife for a worthier man, but unfortunately Jackson Hart, the hero of the story, did not sustain this character.

Business did not come in sufficient quantity to furnish the money necessary to satisfy Hart's extravagant tastes, and to secure the means to live the life he wished to lead he resorted to dishonorable practices. His wife disapproved of his course and finally left him. The architect struggled along until one night a large apartment house that had been constructed according to plans of his own, burned, and seventeen of the inmates lost their lives. The fault was largely his, as he had been criminally guilty in making changes in the plans so that they violated the building ordinances. The catastrophe brought him to a realization of the futility of the life he was leading. He became reconciled to his wife, who persuaded him to appear before the coroner's jury and make a full disclosure of the facts. His business was ruined as a result and he was compelled to close his office and seek employment, which he found without difficulty.

The moral tone of the book is good. The lesson it teaches is wholesome. The story is well told and will hold the attention of the reader. The only thing of which the reader can complain is the failure of the author to take advantage of his opportunities for artistic effect.

Suicide Prevented.

The startling announcement that a preventive of suicide had been discovered will interest many. A run down system, or despondency invariably precede suicide and some has been found that will prevent that condition which makes suicide likely. At the first thought of self destruction take Electric Bitters. It being a great tonic and nerve will strengthen the nerves and build up the system. It's also a great stomach, liver and kidney regulator. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by L. W. McConnell, druggist.

Special round trip rates now in effect to Grand Junction, Colo., Walcott and Rawlins, Wyo.

Taken With Cramps.

Wm. Kirmse, a member of the bridge gang working near Littleport was taken suddenly ill Thursday night with cramps and a kind of cholera. His case was so severe that he had to have the members of the crew wait upon him and Mr. Gifford was called and consulted. He told them he had a medicine in the form of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy that he thought would help him out and accordingly several doses were administered with the result that the fellow was able to be around next day. The incident speaks quite highly of Mr. Gifford's medicines.—Elkader, Iowa, Argus.
