... INDIAN'S CUNNING

THE BLACKFEETS' STORY OF THE GREAT WHITE HORSE.

Daring Strategy by Which This Fleetest of All Steeds Was Secured For His Own Tribe by the Smartest Thief Among the Crows.

All Indians who use horses are very fond of horse racing and not only race their own horses against one another, but they race their own against those of other tribes and used to do this even in the wild era of the buffalo and of constant warfare. Even at that time friendly tribes and bands joined in the two grand buffalo hunts of each year and after the hunting was over pitted the fastest horses of the various bands one against the other. At one time not so very long ago the Blackfeet had the very fastest horse that any one knew of, the fastest horse of which any one could tell or which any one had seen. He was a source of wealth to the tribe, for Indians are very fond of betting, and this animal always won everything that was bet against him. You can imagine how proud the Blackfeet were of this creature. You can also imagine how envious were the Stoneys, the Crows, the Sioux, the Creeks and all the other Indians of the plains.

Stealing is considered fair between tribes, and if it can be successfully done those savage people think it very honorable, even glorious. The Blackfeet, therefore, kept the wonderful race horse in a tent at night. They did not dare leave him out with their other horses. They bought a string of bells at the Hudson Bay company's nearest fort, put the bells around the horse's neck, tied him to a tepee pole inside a big tepee and set four men to sleep in the tent with him. This was the rule every night, and on no night did the men forget to close the door of the tepee and "cinch" it tight with thongs of buckskin. Whoever could steal that big white beauty of a horse had to be a very clever thief, they thought; but, in truth, they never dreamed that he could be stolen.

The smartest thief among the Crow Indians told his chief and the head men that he was going to try to get that horse away from the Blackfeet. One evening he crawled through the grass to the tall bluff along the Bow river (north of our Idaho, I think, was the locality), where the Blackfeet had their camp. He saw the noble horse led into a certain tent, and he saw the four watchers go in and close the door. NOTE-The management desires to Night fell, and he crept down the slanting bluff into the camp. The only thing he had to fear was the barking of some dog. If a dog saw or heard him and barked, that would set all the other dogs barking, and he would be obliged to run for his life. Stealthily, as only an Indian can move on his softly moccasined feet, this arch thief of the thieving Crow Nation crept into the Blackfeet camp. He had to step over several sleeping dogs, and he did not awaken one. He came to the tent of the white horse. He looked it all over. He went to another tepee and took a travois from its side and carried it and set it up against the horse's tent. A travois is the wheel-less wagon the Indians use in the summer. It is made of two long poles with the upper ends near together; the lower ends spread apart and drag upon the ground. You see by this description that if a travois is stood on end it can be made to serve as a sort of ladder. Thus the arch thief of the Crows used the one he put up against the horse tent. On it he climbed to the top of the tepee, and from there he got a view of the interior, looking down between the tent poles that form the sides of the chimney hole. He saw the horse dimly, and even more dimly he saw the four men beside the horse, all asleep. He climbed upon the tent poles; he poised his body very nicely in the chimney opening; he dropped fairly and squarely upon the white horse's back. The instant he felt himself on the back of the beast his knife, which was in his hand, swept through the cord that tethered the horse. His heels shot in against the horse's sides, the bells rang out sharp and clear, and the horse snorted with surprise. But the pressure of the thief's heels urged the animal forward, and as he took one step the man reached out and slit a gash straight up and down through the fastened door, which was only buckskin. The four Indians leaped to their feet, but the horse and his captor were now out in the open ground and like the wind shot away from the camp. The watchers ran and yelled, the dogs barked, the whole tribe rushed out of the tents, and every man sprang to horse. But what was the use? There was no horse that could catch the animal, and so they all turned sadly home again after a mad ride of a mile or two. The thief rode in triumph home to the tents of the Crows, and from that day his tribe owned the great white horse, and his fame and their riches increased.-From Julian Ralph's "Stories Told by Indians" in St. Nicho-

"No one could have been more sur prised than I was when M. Sergius Witte threw his arms about me and kissed me on the cheek," said Conductor E. P. Conductor Therien is himself a European-a Frenchman. As an employee of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, he had had charge of the special train which transported the distinguished foreigner from Newport to Boston, after he had been induced to leave the Mayflower and go overland to Portsmouth. While relating the details of the incident recently he said:

"It is the custom in Europe for men to salute each other by kissing, although in this country it appears strange. I must say that I was surprised, but it was all right. It was M. Witte's manner of showing his appreciation for the courtesies extended to him during his first ride on an American railroad.

"All during the run from Newport to Boston the members of the party conversed in French. I am a Frenchman myself and understood all that was said perfectly. In fact, I talked with members of the party during the trip, though not with M. Witte. You can imagine my surprise then, when, upon reaching Boston, the big Russian smacked me full on the cheek.

"I did not know what to do for a moment. The situation embarrassed me. I have been among Americans so long that I have almost forgotten European customs. When I realized, however, the sincerity with which the salutation had been given by the Russian nobleman I felt greatly honored. You see, it all happened in this way:

"When we stopped at Back Bay M. Witte did not follow the other members of the party to the elevator, but strode off in the direction of the engine. When he reached the cab he motioned to Engineer J. E. Magoun and put his hand out for a handshake. Magoun leaned out of his cab and the two men shook hands. The fireman was honored in the same way.

"As M. Witte turned to join his party I touched him on the elbow to direct him to the elevator, and spoke to him in French. It was then that he threw open his arms, and, with a hearty embrace, kissed me on the cheek."

PASTORS WHO LIKE WORK.

Building Fences, Clenning Streets and Carrying Mail at Winsted. The Rev. Newell M. Calhoun, pastor of the Second Congregational church at Winsted, Conn., and member of the Yale corporation, is building a rustic stone wall in front of Pine Bank, his summer residence on the shores of Highland lake, says a Winsted special to the New York World. His artistic work with the trowel is attracting mason contractors.

The Rev. George Remington, a Baptist clergyman, formerly of Colebrook, is employed by the town raking stones on the highways. The Rev. F. S. Francls of New Hartford, a Methodist clergyman nearly seventy years old, is toiling seven days a week. He carries the mail six days in the week between Collinsville and Torrington and preaches on the seventh.

Sleeve Buoys For Girl Swimmers, One mystery that has been baffling spectators at Bailey's beach in Newport has rested in the fact that many girls who profess they are unable to swim manage to glide through the water in a manner that suggests proficiency in the natatorial art, says the New York Press. Apparently they carried no life preservers to keep them from sinking. Now the secret has been revealed. It appears that the surprising skill of the girls is due to a contrivance they carry up their sleeves. The sleeves, which are decidedly puffy, are fitted up with rubber bags, which are blown up before the garment is donned. Thus the wearers are enabled to strike out in supreme confidence that Davy Jones won't drag them down to his locker.

Tenpots of Glass.

Glass teapots are coming into favor, says the Detroit News-Tribune. They are made of strong, tempered glass, and are delicately trimmed with bands of silver. Inside the teapot a hollow ball of silver rolls about and, by prompt absorption of the heat of the boiling water, prevents the glass from cracking. The charm of the crystal teapot lies not wholly in its beauty, for there is the additional advantage that the teamaker can see just what quantity she has on hand.

Hairdressers for flowers is the latest device in the horticultural realm. Just prior to an exhibition of flowers the artist, or professor, takes in hand such specimens as chrysanthemums, with filament petals, and trims them, cutting them to equal lengths and combing them. He also knows how to coax buds to open, smoothing out the petals and making them resemble flowers that are full blown,
