The Sheep Industry.

This section of the Beaver valley is steadily growing in favor as a sheep feeding territory. The abundant crops of alfalfa and corn produced here furnishes an unlimited supply of feed and for this reason quite a number of farmers are launching out in this industry. The high price of feeders this year has kept a good many from feeding this winter, yet a number are going to feed anyway. The first shipments of feeders are beginning to arrive. B. B. Smiley was one who successfully fed sheep last winter and received 1,500 head Wednesday for this winter's feeding. Powell & Nilsson of Marion have received 3,500 and are expecting 3,500 more in a short time.—Danbury News.

Judge Letton's Acceptance

Gentlemen of the Convention:

I am not in any temper of mind at the present time, or have the power of voice to make a speech. I am not an orator at any time. I want to say that I thank you from the bottom of my heart for this nomination. I think no higher honor can be paid to a citizen of your state than to be nominated for the office of justice of the supreme court. That court carries with it the power of life and death, the disposition of the property of any man in the state, and it is the most responsible position that can be tendered or given to any man in the state. I appreciate the responsibility of this position.

I want to say, too, that if elected, which I expect to be, I shall know neither rich or poor, neither corporation or individual, and that so far as in me lies, I will dispense justice with even hand to every man within the borders of the state.

I am told that your committee on resolutions will report to this convention, declaring against the issuance of free transportation by the railroads in this state. I want to say to you that I am in hearty accord with that declaration.

Further, I understand that they have endorsed our president, and I stand firmly with them on that proposition.

Further, I understand they will report in favor of a direct primary. The closer you get to the people the better for the interests of all.

I wish to thank the convention for this nomination; I want to thank my friends who made the magnificent fight upon this convention floor for me. I thank you all, gentlemen.

Anti-Cigarette Law Valid.

That portion of the anti-cigarette law which makes it unlawful to give away cigarettes and cigarette papers is sustained by the supreme court and the judgment of the district court of Douglas county is reversed, and John Alperson, who was arrested under that clause and who sought to secure his liberty by writ of habeas corpus, is remanded to the custody of the officer. Alperson contended that the part of the act which made giving away of cigarettes and cigarette papers was unconstitutional because it was a subject not sufficiently expressed in the title of the act. The title prohibits the manufacture and sale of cigarettes and cigarette papers. The court says:

If the barter and gifts of cigarettes and cigarette papers is not prohibited by the court it is manifest that the purpose and intent of the legislature is thwarted, and we think that purpose and intent is plainly to be derived from the title of the act itself.

The court holds that the intent of the act is sufficiently expressed in the title and says:

The legislature undoubtedly supposed the use of cigarettes was injurious to the public in general through its effect upon the health and morals of the people. The intention was to remove these articles from the avenues of commerce, to banish them from the state as guilty and illegitimate things that ought not to be offered to or easy of access by vicious or thoughtless people who are or may be injured thereby.

Scholarships to Support Art.

The government of Bavaria has voted a considerable sum for the maintenance of art institutions throughout the kingdom during the coming year. The allowances for the purchase of paintings and their preservation is particularly liberal. The various art institutes in Munich receive handsome subsidies and the Germanic museum in Nuremberg gets an increased allowance. Various other institutions have been voted large amounts for repairs and maintenance. These art allowances in all reach $1,081,163 marks ($739,741).—Emil Hensel, in Chicago Record.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Some of the books sent to Hastings some time ago have been returned.

The November magazines are coming in now.

George Eliot is the greatest of modern female novelists. She has the rare faculty of being relastic without lack of refinement.

Readers will find a wide range of interest and no repetition. Her easier works, "Janet's Repentance," "Brother Jacob" and "Amos Barton" deal somewhat with mysticism, religion and morality. "Adam Bede" deals in the tragedy of every day life and romance. "Mill on the Floss" her masterpiece is one of the most touching stories of the struggles of a genius nature. "Daniel Deronda" contains one of the best treatises on Jewish nature and character. An intensely interesting book "Middlemarch" contain more philosophy but is a strong story. Her works never end in the cut and dried way but deal with elemental passions and sorrows, truer to life than most. Her books may be found at the Public Library. Library hours: Mornings from 10:30 to 12 o'clock, afternoon from 1:30 to 6 o'clock, evenings from 7 to 9 o'clock. Sunday afternoon, 2 to 5 o'clock. IDA McCARL, Librarian.

FEROCIOUS FRIENDSHIP.

An Incident in the Life of the Tragedian Macready.

Between Macready and my brother Charles existed a kind of ferocious friendship. Macready, whatever he may have been in private life, had at the theater a simply horrible temper and he was in the habit of using at rehearsals and even in an undertone when acting the most abusive language—language which my brother sometimes passed by with a smile, but which he occasionally hotly resented. He did not mind Macready constantly addressing him as "beast," but he objected to having his eyes, his limbs and his internal organs combed with invective terms. Yet, oddly enough, the great tragedian, with whom he was constantly quarreling, had a grim respect and liking for him. He knew him to be a gentleman and a scholar and one who was a competent judge of picturesque effect and an acute dramatic critic. On one occasion Macready having to play "Othello," and my brother not being included in the cast, the tragedian thus addressed him: "Beast, I want you to go in front tonight and give me afterward a full and candid opinion as to the merits of my acting. Omit nothing. Tell me how I played and how I looked. I have an idea that I shall surpass myself this evening." Now, the great actor used to go through a tremendous amount of realistic effort in the part of Othello and toward the close of the tragedy would get into such a disorganized physical condition that he was all perspiration and foaming at the mouth and presented a somewhat shocking spectacle.

My brother duly occupied a seat in the front row of the dress circle and narrowly watched the performance from beginning to end. Then he went behind the scenes and repaired to Macready's dressing room. The artist was being disrobed by his dresser and was panting with excitement in an armchair.

"Well, beast, what was it like?" My brother told him that he had derived the highest gratification from the performance and he had never seen him play Othello more superbly. He was magnificent in his speech to the Venetian senate, the jealousy scenes with Iago were splendid, the murder of Desdemona was superb, and he died inimitably. Macready's face lighted up more and more as my brother answered his many queries.

"Tis well, beast," he observed at last. "Tis well—very well, and now, what was my appearance—how did I look, beast?" My brother cogitated for a moment and then, with perfect candor, replied, "Like a sweep, sir!"—G. A. Sala's Recollections.

Unloaded on the Editor.

Soon after arriving in London Justin McCarthy obtained an introduction to an editor who had started what was then the novel feature of publishing short stories in newspapers. Mr. McCarthy wrote a story for him and sent it in. A few days later he called at the office to learn its fate.

"I hope you can see your way to accept it," he said timidly.

"Yes, and sixty more like it," replied the editor.

Nothing more was heard of Mr. McCarthy for several months. When he eventually put in an appearance at the office he had a large parcel with him.

"What have you got there?" asked the editor, seeing him untie the cord.

"These are the sixty stories you asked me to write," answered his visitor. The editor gaped for breath.

"But I didn't ask you to write anything like that number!" he said.

"You expressed your willingness to accept sixty stories like the one I wrote on approval, and here they are. I merely took you at your word," quoth the young Irishman. The stories were not refused.

The Salamander.

In Andrews' "Anecdotes Ancient and Modern" (1789) one reads, "Should a glass house fire be kept up, without extinction for a longer term than seven years, there is no doubt but that salamander would be generated in the cinders." This probably accounts for the popular idea that a salamander lives in the fire, a fallacy so far removed from the truth that the curious lizard-like beast so called cannot endure even the heat of the sun, but skulks away under stones to avoid it. It will never lose its reputation for fire eating, though, which lingers still in the heating utensil that is named after it.

Dickens and Thackeray.

"I once missed meeting Dickens at Chatsworth. He left the day of my arrival," writes Leveson-Gower in his memoirs. "Thackeray came that same afternoon and was anxious to hear about Dickens' visit. He wondered whether he had toadied the duke very much. My impression is that, though professing to be friends, these two great novelists did not care much for one another."

A Careful Wife.

Hubby (desperately)—Give me your clothesline. I'm going to hang myself. Wifey (sweetly)—Oh, George, I'm so sorry. This clothesline is so rotten it won't hold you. You'll have to buy one, dear!—Cleveland Leader.

Sad Result of Experiment.

Aunt ALU.—You think John no longer loves you? New Wife (sobbing)—I—I know it, auntie! I p-p-put on an ug-ugly old hat this morning and he never noticed the dif-dif-difference!—Chicago Tribune.
