Due naval honors had been paid the deceased in impressive services at the barracks, Wednesday of last week, at two o'clock in the afternoon.

He enlisted in the navy at Omaha, Nebraska, November 1st, 1905, and was sent to the U. S. naval training station at Newport, R. I., where he died of cerebrospinal meningitis, January 10, 1906, aged 19 years, 5 months, 25 days. The services at the home, Monday afternoon, were conducted by Rev. M. B. The remains were shipped home by special permission from the government. During the two months Roy was in quarantine on the Coaster Harbor Island in Narragansett Bay near Newport, R. I., he wrote home many loving and encouraging letters, while his comrades were dying about him, all typical of the loving and tender-hearted son he was.
