People Who Are In the News of the Week

DR. HENRY S. PRITCHETT.

DR. HENRY S. PRITCHETT, who has resigned the presidency of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, enjoys a very high standing in the world of learning. He leaves the Institute of Technology in order to devote his whole time to his duties as president of the board of trustees of the Carnegie Foundation. He was once instructor of physics in a small preparatory school.

On one occasion a student seemed unusually dense in grasping a fundamental law of gravitation, and the professor said to him:

"You do not seem to understand when I say that the attractive force of gravity causes objects thrown in the air to fall back to the earth. Have you never heard the saying that 'whatever goes up comes down'?"

The student seemed no better off than before. "But is that true everywhere?" he asked.

The professor was on the point of answering yes when a joke flashed into his mind, and, unable to let the opportunity pass, out he came with it.

"No, there is one exception," he said, smiling; "on shipboard. There everything that goes down comes up."

John F. Fitzgerald, the former representative in congress who was recently chosen mayor of Boston, made a hustling campaign in which automobiles were conspicuous, many addresses being made from them. He is a native of Boston, is forty years old, has a wife and six children, was sent to congress at twenty-seven and made two speeches on the opening day of the session.

MAYOR ELECT J. F. FITZGERALD.

Mayor Fitzgerald tells a story of an Irish couple who, despite a comparatively happy married life, were wont to have violent misunderstandings. Nevertheless the pair were devoted to each other, and when the husband died the widow was inconsolable.

Shortly after the funeral a friend who had dropped in to see how Mrs. Milligan was getting on chanced to remark: "Well, there's one blessing, Maggie, for they do say that poor Mike died happy."

"Indeed he did," responded the widow. "The dear lad! The lasht thing he done was to crack me over the head with a medicine bottle!"

Attention has again been directed to the character of Leopold, king of the Belgians, by Mark Twain's arraignment of him. According to this famous American writer, King Leopold is more barbarous and cruel than the Africans of the Congo Free State over whom he rules. It is expected that the atrocities said to have been committed in the Congo, under Leopold's administration of that extensive country, will shortly result in an inquiry by the powers of England. To interest Americans in the matter Mark Twain, or Samuel L. Clemens, as he is in private life, has published at his own expense "King Leopold's Soliloquy," in which the alleged offenses of the ruler are satirically set forth. Mr. Clemens in characterizing the man responsible for the wholesale brutalities said to have been committed in the Congo says:

KING LEOPOLD.

"Beside Leopold, Nero, Caligula, Attila, Torquemada, Genghis Khan and such killers of men are amateurs."

Henry Clews, the New York banker and financial writer, is of the opinion that too large salaries have been paid by some insurance companies and other corporations in the past. "For instance," he said, "the head of a trust company or of a bank who is receiving $25,000 or $50,000 reads that the president of an insurance company gets $150,000, and he immediately becomes dissatisfied, knowing that his talents are of better quality than those of the other man. I think that the salary of the president of the United States—$50,000—should be the highest paid in this country and serve as a basis for all others."

HENRY CLEWS.

Mr. Clews has a reputation both as a sage and as a wit. He was talking once with a friend of a meeting of a chapter of the Sons of the Mayflower or something of that sort.

"It's a mighty good thing to have descended from some of these famous people," said Mr. Clews to his friend.

"Yes; gives 'em a sort of social standing they might otherwise miss."

"But that wasn't exactly what I meant," responded Mr. Clews.

"What then?"

"Because they've such good constitutions. Descendants of the common people of those days seem to have all died."

RUNNING THE GANTLET.

This Punishment Was Once Used For Military Discipline.

The following extracts give information concerning the punishment of "running the gantlet."

"In running the gantlope the regiment was formed six deep, and the ranks opened and faced inward. Each man being furnished with a switch, the offender, naked to the waist, was led through the ranks, preceded by a sergeant, the point of whose reversed halbert was presented to his breast to prevent his running too fast. As he thus passed through the ranks every soldier gave him a stroke."—Grose's "Military Antiquities," volume 2, page 108.

But the oldest notice I have seen is given in "Monro—His Expedition With the Worthy Scots Regiment (called Mackeyes Regiment), Levied In August, 1626, Etc. London. Printed by William Jones In Red-Crosse Streete, 1637."

"Other slight punishments we enjoyne for slight faults, put in execution by their camarades, as the loupe-garthe (running the gantlet; Swedish gantulopp, to run through a hedge made by soldiers), when a souldier is stripped naked above the waste and is made to runne a furlong betwixt 200 souldiers ranged alike opposite to others, leaving a space in the midst for the souldier to runne through, where his camarades whip him with small rods ordained and cut for the purpose by the Gavilliger (provost marshal), and all to keepe good order and discipline."—London Notes and Queries.

WEDDING SPEECHES.

Some That Were Not In the Usual Conventional Style.

A wedding in New York at which the bridesmaids were representative of six nationalities and each felicitated the bride in the language of her own country was an odd affair, but probably not so well received as the speech of a young Englishman who was called upon to propose the toast, "The Bridesmaids." Apprised of his ordeal in advance, he had devised an escape, and with the single statement that silence was golden he brought from his pocket a set of gold bangles, which he bestowed upon the attendants of the bride.

At a wedding feast at Dol, in Normandy, the demand for a speech resulted in the production of a guitar, upon which the speaker accompanied himself while he chanted the praises of the bride. Had he stopped there all would have been well, but he changed to a praise of his store, and the guests threw him out of the house.

Doubtless a similar fate should have befallen the sharpshooter who wrote the name of the bride upon the wall with pistol bullets, to the serious damage of the wall paper. Almost as odd was the performance of a German music hall performer, who, when called upon for entertainment, mounted the table upon his hands and balanced himself upon glasses, cups and other furnishings.

Funny Blunders.

A famous sculpture group recently exhibited in Glasgow represents Adam and Eve after they had left Eden. Eve, in despair, lies at Adam's feet. Through a mistake an intelligent attendant placarded it with this description: "Motherless." At the same exhibition was a sleeping nymph, by a well known sculptor, which by another mistake appeared in the catalogue as "Mrs. —," greatly to the horror of Glasgow. A Sunday school boy recently gave this account of the prophet Elijah: "Elijah, the prophet, was carried into heaven by a whirlwind, and the children staid up and cried: 'Go up, thou baldhead! Go up, thou baldhead!' And before he went up he divided the Red sea."

He Saw the Joke.

"One day," says an American, "I walked into a bookshop in the Strand and asked for Hare's 'Walks In London.' In America the book is sold in one thick volume. The clerk brought it in two. 'Oh, I said as I looked at them, 'you part your 'Hare' in the middle, do you?' 'I, sir?' he said, with a bewildered look. 'Oh, no, sir!' I saw he didn't see the joke, so I didn't explain, but bought the books and went away. A week later I went to the same shop. As soon as the clerk saw me he rushed from the back of the shop, laughing vociferously. 'Good!' he shouted. 'Capital! Part your 'Hare' in the middle! That's capital, sir, capital!'—London Tit-Bits.

Love's Grammar.

"I wish I dared to ask you something, Miss Helen," said Percy, with trembling voice and wabbling chin.

"Why don't you dare to ask it?" the maiden said demurely.

"Because I can see 'No' in your eyes."

"In both of them?"

"Y-yes."

"Well, don't you—don't you know two negatives are equivalent to an—"

"How dare you, sir? Take your arm from around my waist instantly!"

But he didn't.

A Question.

"You'll let me come to your wedding, dear, of course?"

"Well, I can't promise. My people are so enraged at my choice that I hardly know whether I shall be allowed to go myself."

A Dyer.

He—Do you think blonds have more admirers than brunettes? She—I don't know. You might ask Miss Turner. She has had experience in both capacities—New Yorker.

If we are not willing to work and suffer for the sake of our love, we have not the artist soul within us.

The Coming Marriage of Miss Roosevelt

IT is said that when the Taft party was in the Philippines Datto J. Kamin of the Moros wanted to present some pearls to the daughter of the president. There were suppressed smiles when, rather awkwardly, he offered them, wrapped in a piece of brown paper, and there were smiles mingled with blushes on the faces of two people when the gallant datto said that they were for "the Princess Longworth." The Moro chief was a little "previous," but in this respect was not without good company. The American newspapers have kept the public well informed about the romance between the president's oldest daughter and Congressman Nicholas Longworth, and when the official announcement came a few days ago nobody was particularly surprised.

It was Janice Meredith who in the novel of that name rejected her suitor four times, but accepted him at the fifth proposal. There is a story that Miss Alice went Paul Leicester Ford's heroine two better and only accepted the persistent Ohio statesman when he had asked for her hand the seventh time. He met her first at her coming out party in 1902 and the initial proposal was about a year after that, say those who think they know, but "Nick" as his colleagues in congress sometimes call him in private, had rivals. He has a small fortune, but some of his rivals were men of much greater wealth than he can boast, and some of them had high sounding titles, and in the view of many American society girls a count ranks far ahead of a mere congressman, but titles did not dazzle the president's daughter, and the suit of the Ohio representative met with success.

The wedding in February will attract national interest. Indeed, interest in the event will by no means be confined to this continent. With the possible exception of Queen Victoria's marriage it is difficult to recall a matrimonial event of the century past which received as much attention as Miss Roosevelt's wedding is likely to receive on both sides of the Atlantic. The nearest approach to it was the wedding of Nellie Grant. Her marriage to Mr. Sartoris in 1874 took place while General Grant occupied the White House and was a brilliant social function. The ceremony was performed in the east room and was attended by several hundred guests, including the members of the cabinet and the diplomatic corps. Nellie Grant was a great favorite with her father, but a shadow was cast over the festivities by his doubts concerning the advisability of the match, doubts which proved to be justified. The country was not so united then as now, and in consequence Miss Nellie Grant was not so general a favorite throughout the country, both north and south, as Miss Roosevelt is, nor did the affairs of the United States attract so much attention across the ocean then as they have attracted since the Spanish war and the peace of Portsmouth. The marriage of President Cleveland to Miss Frances Folsom took place in the blue room. It was a quiet affair, the ceremony being performed in the presence of only four or five persons. The first marriage in the White House was that of Robert Todd, son of Dolly Madison by her first husband. It was during President Madison's second term. The first White House wedding in which a daughter of a president figured was the marriage of Miss Maria Monroe, youngest daughter of President Monroe, in 1820. Harriet Lane Johnston, niece of President Buchanan, was married in the White House.

The union of Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth on Feb. 17 will be solemnized in the blue room, and the officiating clergyman will be the Right Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Washington. There will be a short wedding journey, and after congress adjourns Mr. Longworth will take his bride on a longer trip, which will include a tour of Europe. On their return to Washington they will live in a plain brick structure at the southeast corner of Eighteenth and I streets, a house owned by a man named John Jones. Mr. Longworth now lives there with his mother. The prospective bridegroom is a well built, good looking, popular young man. Miss Roosevelt is twenty-two; Mr. Longworth, thirty-six. He is now serving his second term in congress and belongs to an old Ohio family whose ancestral home in Cincinnati is one of the show places of the city.

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does it does through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.
