

A New Magazine for You

I am bringing out another new magazine that you will come pretty close to liking. I wouldn't be surprised if it hit you harder than anything in the shape of a magazine you have ever seen. There isn't much style to it, but it has the stuff in it that you and everybody else will want to read. It is called

Something New in Magazine Making

THE SCRAP BOOK is the most elastic thing that ever happened in the way of a magazine—elastic enough to carry anything from a tin whistle to a battleship. Everything that appeals to the human brain and human heart comes within its compass—fiction, which is the backbone of periodical circulation; biography, review, philosophy, science, art, poetry, wit, humor, pathos, satire, the weird, the mystical—everything that can be classified and everything that cannot be classified. A paragraph, a little bit, a saying, an editorial, a joke, a maxim, an epigram.

Nothing Like It in the World

There isn't anything in the world just like THE SCRAP BOOK. It is an idea on which we have been working for several years, and for which we have been gathering materials. We have bought hundreds and hundreds of scrap books from all over the country, some of them a century old, and are still buying them. From these books we are gathering and classifying an enormous number of gems, and facts and figures, and historical and personal bits that are of rare value. Furthermore, we have a corps of people ransacking libraries, reading all the current publications, the leading daily papers, and digging out curious and quaint facts and useful facts and figures from reference book, cyclopedia, etc., etc.

Don't fail to get a copy of this first issue of THE SCRAP BOOK. It sells at the price at which all our other magazines sell—Ten Cents a Copy and One Dollar by the Year.

The Wedding of Miss Roosevelt and Nicholas Longworth, M.C.

BISHOP HENRY Y. SATTERLEE.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt request the pleasure of your company at the marriage of their daughter Alice Lee to Mr. Nicholas Longworth, On Saturday, February the Seventeenth, Nineteen Hundred and Six, at twelve o'clock.

An answer is requested.

All the world has been looking forward for weeks to this auspicious event. No prince and princess of modern Europe or of bygone days of mediaeval pomp and pageantry were ever married under circumstances more picturesque and romantic. The love story of the happy pair has been told a thousand times all around the globe, and in all lands hearts have throbbed as they felt the one touch of nature that makes the whole world kin.

The invitation to the ceremony on Feb. 17 is couched in as simple phraseology as possible. The cards were sent to about a thousand persons, this number being all who could be invited to the White House for the function without uncomfortably crowding it. It is the intention of the president and his charming wife to make the wedding a family affair rather than a ceremony of state, and both parties to the mat-than a costume of greater pretentiousness. The gown is a shimmering robe of silver and white brocade trimmed with exquisite rose point lace, inherited by the bride elect from her own mother, the president's first wife, who died when Miss Alice was three days old and who before her marriage was Miss Alice Lee. The material of which the gown is fashioned was woven in Newark, N. J., and on its completion the loom cords were destroyed so that the pattern could not be reproduced. The workman employed upon the shut-

MISS ALICE ROOSEVELT.

He is said to have received a present of $50. The statement is made that if the threads of the gown were elongated they would stretch from New York to San Francisco, and even then enough would be left to encircle Pike's peak.

At the wedding breakfast immediately following the ceremony the bride will be surrounded by the young women who have been her special chums and who would have been invited to be bridesmaids but for the danger of making discriminations and wounding somebody's feelings. The presents promise to be very numerous and costly, as the heads of many foreign governments will take this opportunity of expressing esteem and friendship for the American people by gifts to the young woman whose sire happens at this time to occupy the post of chief magistrate.

The presents from the potentates of kingdoms and empires will be costly. But both the bride and bridegroom, who are true blue Americans and of democratic spirit, will appreciate, too, the less expensive tokens of good will from personal friends and also from private citizens whose acquaintance they do not possess. Even the Kansas farmer who sent some turnips which had won a prize at the county fair will not be ignored in the letters of acknowledgment, and the Chinese merchant who presented some especially fine preserved ginger will be thanked, though Mr. Longworth does not wish any more ginger sprinkled into the proceedings. There will be a wedding journey to Europe after congress adjourns, and on their return the couple will live in Washington except between sessions of congress, when their residence will be the old Longworth home in Cincinnati.

It was in February twenty-two years ago that Miss Roosevelt was born. It was in that month that she made her bow to the American public when she christened the Emperor William's yacht Meteor. It is in that month, too, that she will be married, and the event comes pretty near being on the festival day of good old St. Valentine. Mr.

THE LONGWORTH SMILE.

Longworth is fourteen years the senior of his future bride. Despite the fact that he had passed the age of extreme susceptibility to romantic sentiment, he was a most ardent wooer, and those wise in such matters predict that he will be a devoted husband. It is believed that the president's daughter turned down titled foreigners in order to accept her untitled American admirer. At a dinner in Philadelphia the prospective bridegroom gallantly said: "I am a lucky man, and I know it. I realize that I stand here shining in reflected glory, but when the rays come from the sun, then indeed I am glad. And I think," he added, glancing into another apartment where Miss Roosevelt's smiling face could be discerned, "I think I see the sun shining behind the palm trees in the other room."
