Coming Changes In Supreme Court

JUSTICE HENRY B. BROWN.

THE recent decision of the United States supreme court on the subject of the trusts and the anticipated changes in the membership of the body have drawn especial attention to the judicial institution which occupies so high a place in the respect and esteem of all Americans. As the court of last resort of the republic the nine justices of the supreme court possess powers which have no parallel among the courts of other nations. It has been said that the constitutional convention of 1787 scarcely realized the great powers it conferred upon the supreme court in creating that body and that if it had and the people of the states had understood the same the constitution might not have been adopted, so great was the jealousy of the states at that time as to the powers they themselves claimed. It is generally recognized today as the most august body of the kind in existence. It is the balance wheel by which the affairs of the nation in its relation to the states are kept in order and is the final judge of the validity of all laws passed by congress or by the legislatures of the several states when brought to the test of the constitution of the United States. The lawmakers at Washington stand in wholesome fear of its powers, and in the discussion now in progress on the railroad rate bill every effort is being put forth by friends of railway rate reform to frame a measure which will pass the inspection of the supreme court.

The court has made several decisions recently which are considered to strengthen greatly the interests of the people when opposed by the power of corporations. Some of these decisions relate to interpretation of the anti-trust law, and one sustains the contentions made by the city of Chicago in its contest with traction corporations, thereby creating a precedent for the guidance of other judges in the decision of similar questions. There were ten decisions affecting the right claimed by corporations to refuse to furnish evidence concerning their affairs on the ground that such evidence might be used to incriminate them. Two related to the so called tobacco trust cases, and the majority opinion in them was delivered by Associate Justice Henry B. Brown. He declared that the right of a person under the fifth amendment to the constitution to refuse to incriminate himself was "purely a personal privilege of the witness" and not intended to apply to a corporation.

Justice Brown was appointed to the supreme bench from Michigan by President Harrison in 1890. He was born in March, 1836, and has therefore reached the age of seventy. In so doing he became eligible for retirement, but that is a matter a supreme court justice exercises his discretion about. Some justices have served until past eighty. The late Justice Stephen J. Field served thirty-four years, or until he was eighty-one. It was during the latter portion of his service that Justice Brown took a seat in the tribunal. Judge Field was not able, by reason of infirmities, to do his share of the work, and the court was somewhat handicapped in consequence. The other judges were overworked. Talking of the situation to a friend, Justice Brown said one day:
"When I get to be seventy, if I don't resign from the bench, I want you to come to Washington and kick me off."
A few days ago this friend paid a visit to him.
"I have come to remind you of a conversation we had ten years ago," remarked his friend. "This is your seventieth birthday, and I have come to comply with the instructions you gave me then."
Justice Brown remembered the conversation and laughed. But he had already notified the president of his intention to retire. It is understood that he will continue to serve for several months to come. The retirement of Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller is also expected in the near future. He is now seventy-three years of age and was appointed by President Cleveland in 1888.

Close of Fitch School.

Miss Della Schoonover closed a very successful term of school in the Fitch district, Friday of last week, giving the patrons an entertainment in the evening, which was especially enjoyed. Dialogues, songs, recitations, and a concert by W. B. Fearn and his superb phonograph, lent mirth and pleasure to the evening.

The women of the neighborhood spread a feast in the evening of such generous proportions that your correspondent couldn't keep track of how many courses it consisted. At any rate it made one of your city 5-course lunches look like 17 cents.

The evening closed with many warm good wishes to Miss Schoonover, who goes to her home for rest, leaving us happy, peaceful and harmonious.

One fact became apparent at this affair—namely, the need of more room. Quite a number had to stand up during the entertainment. A larger building would not come amiss.

Amateur Burglars Operate.

Some amateur burglars operated in the city, Wednesday night of this week. The establishments of Polk Bros., David Wagner and Keegan & Okerson were visited. Nothing of much value was secured at any of these places. Entrance in each case was secured by breaking out window panes in rear of buildings. The most serious loss was sustained by Mr. Wagner, where the cash register was taken out into the back yard and badly broken. The work was amateurish and stupid.

WILCOX'S DUROC-JERSEY AND POLAND CHINA BROOD SOW SALE

at his farm 2 1/2 miles southeast of McCook, Neb., commencing at 1 o'clock, p. m.

Twenty Duroc-Jersey Sows most of them sired by the great 800-lb. Jumbo Jun, 26313, a son of Morton & Co.'s celebrated Jumbo Red 7973. These sows are safe in pig by my Duroc herd boar, Eclipse 31683, purchased at a long price from a show herd at the Nebraska State Fair last year. He was well inside the money in the strongest Duroc Show ever made.

Twenty Poland China Sows strong in Missouri Black Chief, Tecumseh and Perfection blood, and safe in pig by my Poland China herd boar, Col. McCook 40457, by Expansion 26293, the celebrated boar at the head of the herd of Dawson & Son, Endicott, Neb. This is one of the best hogs in the west and will weigh 500 lbs. as a yearling. He stands up well, has splendid bone and is a type of the modern Poland China, the great general purpose hog. He has had more prize winning brothers and sisters in the state fairs in the last three years than any other family of hogs shown.

TERMS: Cash or Bankable Note

Positively no hogs to be removed until after close of sale. Crates furnished at cost. Free conveyance from Blue Front Barn to the sale. Send for catalogue. Free lunch at noon.
