Uncle Sam and The Powder Trust

THERE is talk at Washington about blowing up the powder trust. At any rate, the bills now under consideration in congress would have some such effect as this if enacted into law. It has been stated on the floor of the house of representatives that the government is in the power of a trust, so far as obtaining its supply of powder is concerned, and that in case of a war it could not get enough powder for a prolonged campaign, as the plants now in existence would not be able to provide it. It has been argued that the government should have a powder plant of its own, and this is contemplated in bills which have been introduced. Secretary Taft of the war department has notified congress, however, that he would not counsel the embarkation of the government in powder manufacture to such an extent as to drive from business the plants of a private character now engaged in powder making.

The institution commonly called the powder trust is the company known as E. I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. The parent plant is in Delaware, but there are now other plants in various parts of the country. The history of this company dates back to the beginning of the nineteenth century, and the Du Pont family has had a prominent part in the defense of the nation. The Du Ponts have borne themselves gallantly in the fighting, and they have supplied powder to the government in three wars.

The founder of the American Du Pont family was Pierre Samuel Du Pont de Nemours, who was born near Paris in 1739. He was an expounder of the economic system of Quesnay and was secretary of the assembly of notables in 1787, member of the states general from Nemours in 1789 and later was president of the constituent assembly. Though he was a reformer, he was conservative in his methods and thus won the hostility of the revolutionists and only escaped the guillotine through the death of Robespierre. After his house had been looted and his property destroyed by the mob he took refuge in this country, bringing with him his sons Victor and Eleuthere

T. COLEMAN DU PONT.

Irene. They landed at Newport in 1800. During the reign of terror the younger son, Eleuthere Irene, was in retirement at Essone, where the government powder works were located, and there became a student under the great chemist Lavoissier and examined the processes by which powder was produced. This knowledge served him in good stead on arriving in this country. His attention was called to the bad character of the powder in use by the American government, and he determined to establish a plant for manufacture of this much needed article. Thomas Jefferson invited him to locate in Virginia, but on account of the existence of slavery in that state and also in Maryland he chose Delaware instead and in 1802 brought models and machinery from France and set up the original plant on the Brandywine. A short time afterward the elder Du Pont, who had returned to France, assisted in the negotiations which resulted in the transfer of Louisiana territory to the United States. He remained in France until 1816, but died in 1817 at the family home near Wilmington. The great powder making industry founded by E. I. Du Pont has remained for a hundred years in the hands of the Du Pont family. When E. I. Du Pont died in 1834 he was succeeded as head of the business by his son, Alfred Du Pont, who in turn was succeeded on his death in 1850 by his brother, General Henry D. Du Pont. His son, General Henry A. Du Pont, is perhaps the most distinguished living member of the family. He was a Union soldier in the civil war, was brevetted four times for "distinguished services and gallantry in action" and won a congressional medal of honor. He claimed election to the United States senate from Delaware in 1895, but was not seated owing to the famous factional contest which for several years has prevented Delaware from having more than one representative in the upper branch of congress. He is one of the most powerful of Edward S. Addicks' opponents. The present head of the powder firm is T. Coleman Du Pont. The late Rear Admiral Samuel Francis Du Pont, son of Victor and grandson of Pierre Samuel Du Pont de Nemours, was one of the most conspicuous of the naval officers on the Union side in the civil war, and another Du Pont, Lamont, rendered the Union cause great service.

GORKY AND HIS MISSION.

The Russian Poet and Novelist of Protest and His Career.

When Maxim Gorky, the Russian author and revolutionist, landed in this country he was at once overwhelmed with invitations to dine, in accordance with the American habit of discussing all questions, grave and gay, political or religious, literary, scientific or commercial, over the banquet table. At one such meal, when the Russian reformer ate with such well known Americans as Mark Twain, Robert Collier, David Graham Phillips, Robert Hunter and Arthur Brisbane, he appeared in his characteristic costume of a blue blouse buttoned high up in the neck, though most of the guests were attired in conventional evening dress. In this Gorky but followed out his ideas as a Socialist, for he believes in the leveling of all distinctions as to rank or class. His visit to America is in the interest of the movement in this country to help the Russian revolutionists by raising funds for the purchase of arms. Gorky and his sympathizers believe that the Russian people can only obtain a full measure of liberty through the use of force and that their friends in America should aid in supplying the shovels of war. "The blood," says Gorky, "we will give ourselves. We need money, money, money. I come to you as a beggar that Russia may be free."

Gorky himself has already given a fortune in aid of the revolutionary cause. This fortune he made through the sale of his books, which have enjoyed a great popularity not only in Russia, but in other parts of Europe and even in America. He now aims to make more money, through writing and lecturing, to devote to the same cause. On his visit to the United States he is accompanied by a handsome Russian actress known on the stage as Mme. Andreava, and by his secretary, Herman Teodorevitch Bonrenine.

Maxim Gorky is the author's pen name and means "the bitter one." His real name is Alexei Maximovitch Pleshkoff. His pen name is expressive of his character, for his writings tell of the suffering and misery of the Russian masses, and the author knows whereof he speaks, for he was a walf and an outcast himself. He has been called "the tramp novelist." He was born in 1868 in Niji Novgorod, and his father, who was very poor, died when the boy was five years old. Bootblack, scullion, baker's apprentice and kicked around by everybody, Gorky was raised in a pessimistic school, and when he took up writing it was as a poet and novelist of protest. He has often been under arrest for speaking too plainly and has passed much time in prison.

JAY GOULD, ATHLETE.

Grandson of Famous Financier, Who Has Won Honors in Tennis.

In planning his famous winter home at Lakewood, N. J., known as Georgian Court, the late Jay Gould's eldest son, George Gould, made ample provision for members of his family to indulge in athletic exercises. A devotee of polo himself, he gave special attention to providing every facility for playing this game and also tennis. He encouraged his sons Kingdon and Jay to become athletes, and they have well fulfilled their father's ambitions for them in this respect. Jay, who is now seventeen, has for some years shown a special fondness for tennis, and his practice on the courts at Lakewood has finally resulted in his capturing the national championship in court tennis. This he did recently by defeating Charles E. Sands, the former champion, at the Racquet and Tennis club, New York, and he has gone to England to participate in the British championship tournament to be held at the Queen's club, London. Experts in the game regard his playing as remarkable. He is not of large frame, but is very active, and his muscles have the suppleness requisite to success in tennis.

THROAT EXERCISES.

Evils That Come From Misuse of the Vocal Organs.

The chronic sore throat is not infrequently produced by the misuse of the vocal organs. Very often that unruly little member, the tongue, is accountable for the difficulty, as it is for a great many other troubles in this transitory life. Many people have a habit when talking of pushing the tongue so far back against the delicate membranes that line the throat that irritation more or less painful is caused, and if it continues any length of time ulcers will form, and so will a doctor's bill.

Control of the tongue is excellent in all senses of the word. Physically this organ may be managed by depressing it into a hollow at a point three-quarters of an inch back of where the tip of it comes when in a natural position in the mouth and at the same time singing very light head tones. This exercise requires some patience at first, but the habit of keeping the tongue down is soon acquired. In speaking or singing it should not be allowed to hoop up and fill the mouth, thus interfering with the free passage of the tones of the voice from the throat to the front of the mouth, where they should strike and then escape clear as a bell. This hooping up of the tongue in the mouth is the cause of much of the indistinct and slovenly utterances to which we are too often obliged to listen.

In many people we notice the line from the point of the chin to the neck is in the form of a right angle. In a shapely throat this line forms a curve, just as a canary's does when the small yellow artist is warbling his carols.

To develop the throat and make this angle a curve stand before a mirror so that you may watch the throat swell out. Now thrust your tongue out as far as it will go, then draw it back quickly and forcibly, at the same time bringing it downward in the mouth as far as you can. Place your thumb and forefinger against the larynx (commonly called the Adam's apple), and if you are making the right movement you will feel the larynx pass downward. For a week or two make the movements lightly. After that time put as much force into it as you can. The exercise should be practiced for a few minutes several times a day to insure rapid and good results.

To fill up the hollows of the neck stand correctly and then slowly fill the lungs with air without elevating your shoulders. As the air is forced upward into the throat hold it there a few seconds and then expel slowly. This exercise is best performed soon after rising in the morning and before retiring at night.—New York Post.

Time and Eternity.

The stream of time never runs dry, and the ocean of eternity will forever send its mighty surges mountain high against the bank of time's little stream, sweeping with each receding billow over its expansive bosom the frail human craft from the shore of time, with earth's happiness, human affection, toil, trials, tears and sin, to the eternal shore of celestial beauty and bliss. Oh, mighty ocean of eternity, your wonderful anthem of life and death brings eternal woe and condemnation to him who is untrue to himself and his divine pilot, but to the trusting, faithful man it sings of endless felicity in the presence of time who has redeemed his people from the bondage of sin and has swept them through the pearly gates.—Ducktown (Tenn.) Gazette.

The Wonderful Diatom.

One of the most wonderful things in vegetable life is a beautiful and minute class of seaweeds called diatoms. They belong to the seaweed family, yet they may be found by the thousands in any roadside ditch, fresh or salt water lake or even in cisterns, wells, springs, etc. Most species of plants are made up of an infinite number of little cells, but with the diatom it is otherwise. Each representative of this wonderful family of plants is formed of but a single cell and this so minute that it would require 2,500 of the most common form, laid end to end, to make a string an inch in length. Some species of diatoms have the power of independent motion, and on that account were for some time believed to be animals.

Candy and the Flag.

The following is accredited to the late Senator Hoar: At a Fourth of July celebration in a Canadian town where both English and American guests were assembled the flags of the two countries were used in decorations. A frivolous young English girl, loyal to the queen, but with no love for the stars and stripes, exclaimed: "Oh, what a silly looking thing the American flag is! It suggests nothing but checkerberry candy." "Yes," replied Senator Hoar, "the kind of candy that has made everybody sick who ever tried to lick it."

Charity.

Charity is a universal duty which it is in every man's power sometimes to practice, since every degree of assistance given to another upon proper motives is an act of charity, and there is scarcely any man in such a state of imbecility as that he may not, on some occasions, benefit his neighbor.—Johnson.

His Advantage.

First Man—How do you do? Second Man—Beg pardon, but you have the advantage of me. First Man—Yes; I guess I have. We were engaged to the same girl, but you married her.

The taste of beauty and the relish of what is decent, just and amiable perfect the character of the gentleman and the philosopher.—Shaftesbury.

Get SCOTT'S Emulsion

When you go to a drug store and ask for Scott's Emulsion you know what you want; the man knows you ought to have it. Don't be surprised, though, if you are offered something else. Wines, cordials, extracts, etc., of cod liver oil are plentiful but don't imagine you are getting cod liver oil when you take them. Every year for thirty years we've been increasing the sales of Scott's Emulsion. Why? Because it has always been better than any substitute for it.
