

PERHAPS the most astonishing note of the senatorial campaign is that just recently sounded by Charles J. Greene, the Burlington attorney of Omaha, in declaring Edward Rosewater of the Bee the logical candidate for the office of U. S. senator. While the great common people will look askance at this pronouncement from such a remarkable source, its significance cannot be overlooked, and gives added importance to the fact that Edward Rosewater is a sure-enough candidate and will have to be reckoned with.

ONE has but to follow the investigations of the Inter-state Commerce commission through the different states to be compelled to the conclusion that the railroads and other great corporations and trusts of the United States must come soon under federal control of an adequate and effective nature. It is quite beyond believe, the extent to which the corporations have gone in corrupting the people in the use of rebates, passes, special favors of various sorts. Graft and special favors and free transportation have become a curse of mammoth and menacing proportions, enabling the favored and powerful, the unscrupulous and conscienceless to thrive and prosper prodigiously, when honest, honorable, square-dealing men of merit and ability "lost out" absolutely because of their inability to complete with the graft and rebate robbers. Federal control has come to be an urgent necessity in the face of such facts. It is no longer a question of expediency.

Married.

The marriage of Miss Mary Elizabeth Smith and Mr. Thomas Joseph Grant both of this city, took place yesterday morning at nine o'clock at St. Joseph's Catholic church in the presence of a large number of relatives and invited friends. The Nuptial Mass was celebrated by the Very Rev. Father Cullen, pastor. The attendants were Miss Sarah O'Conner, of Grafton, cousin of the bride, and Mr. John Grant, brother of the groom. Miss Lizzie Grant played the wedding march and presided at the organ during the Mass.

The bride wore a handsome wedding gown of white silk mull and lace with tulle veil, caught to the hair with a small coronet of orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was of bride's roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of pink silk mull and wore pink roses.

A sumptuous three-course breakfast was served to about thirty invited guests by caterer, Mrs. Haag, at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. M. T. Grant on Burlington avenue and Tenth street. Miss Theresa Zimmerman and Miss Margaret Whelan served. Among those who partook of the wedding breakfast was the Very Rev. Father Cullen.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant received many beautiful and useful presents.

These young people are both well and favorably known in this city. The bride is a niece of Mrs. Phillip Wolf and has made her home with her since coming to York. She is a lady of charming personality, and by her gentle ways and ladylike conduct has won the greatest respect and highest regards of every one. The groom is a trusted employee of the York gas company and is a young man of excellent qualities.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant left on the noon train for the East and after a brief wedding trip will be at home to their friends at 814 Platte avenue where the groom has a neat cottage fitted up.

A number of the guests were at the train to wish them measureless joys and that the mutual happiness of their wedding day will grow and bloom with full luxuriance as they go on life's journey.—York Democrat.

THE ZULU UPRISING

THE SPIRIT OF UNREST AMONG AFRICAN NATIVES AND ITS CAUSES.

The Bravery and Discipline of the Dark Skinned Warriors Who Gave the British So Much Trouble Twenty-Five Years Ago—Chief Chaka.

The uprising of the Zulus under Chief Bambaata against the English has directed attention once more to South Africa, which has so often in the past half century been the theater of war or the scene of more or less bloody conflicts between natives and European settlers. The Zulu uprising is not the only disaffection which exists in the dark continent, indicative of unrest on the part of the natives and a disposition to resist the invasion by Europeans and the rule of the foreigner. In French Nigeria a new mahdi has appeared at the head of a cloud of religious fanatics, and the French have suffered defeat at his hands. There has been trouble in northern Nigeria, too, where a company of British soldiers was overwhelmed. In German West Africa there has been disaffection, and it is believed by many that wars are on the point of breaking out in Ashanti and Belgian Congo. Strangely enough, the discontent among the colored races in various sections of Africa is by some ascribed in part to the work of American negro missionaries who, in spreading the Christian religion among their dark kinsmen, have told them of the freedom and opportunities for advancement possessed by members of their race in America and have thus awakened a spirit of independence among the African natives who are subject to the rule of Europeans. Many of these missionaries have encouraged education and helped push the dark skinned Africans along on the pathway of intellectual and industrial progress, and in some parts of South Africa the natives have attained quite a degree of civilization and realize something about what freedom in a large sense means. In others, where the tribes are still wild and ignorant, their chief idea of freedom is extermination of their white rulers.

The Zulus are the strongest and bravest of the Kaffir inhabitants of South Africa. Under their powerful Chief Chaka, who organized his warriors into regiments after the European fashion, they reduced the surrounding tribes to subjection, and it was only Cetewayo, with whom the British soldiers had such a sharp conflict about twenty-six years ago. The British conquered, but only after heavy losses, and the country of the Zulus was then parceled out under several chieftains under British rulership.

The Zulus are of fine physique, are proud of their traditions and achievements of their race and are expert in wielding the battle-axe and the assagai, a kind of spear. They have also learned how to shoot accurately. In the towns of Natal Zulu police officers may be seen, and they make a fine looking body of men, though their European helmets and uniforms do not harmonize with their bare legs and feet.

It was a stern discipline which prevailed among the Zulus under the renowned Chief Chaka. After dividing his warriors into regiments and establishing rewards to encourage a competitive spirit among them he trained them to advance and attack in solid formation and developed the close quarters attack with the assagai. He established an inviolate law that any soldier returning from battle without assagai or shield or with a wound in his back should be executed as a coward.

Hank White Gave the Tip.

Hank White, the minstrel, lived in Reading, Vt., for many years. He was very fond of horse races, and rarely missed any of the meetings in Windsor or Rutland county. Once he attended a breeders' meeting at Rutland. The breeders' meetings were famous and attracted people from New York, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and all over Vermont. On this particular day Hank was seated in the grand stand, one of 5,000 people.

"The Queen of Sicily."

Syracuse calls itself the capital of the south, but it has no cause to dispute pride of place with Palermo. The metropolitan city is superior in population, wealth and much else, but it is deficient in what its ancient and glorious rival has in such abundance. For Syracuse has the supreme charm of Greece in a way that no other city except Athens has. Not even in Corinth, nowhere in Hellas from Messana or Sparta in the south to Thebes in the north, is there any Hellenic town to compare with "the queen of Sicily." As a sanctuary, Delphi is far more impressive than anything in Sicily, as a national meeting place Olympia has no rival, but nowhere except at Athens is a Greek city to be seen today which has the proud record of the marvelous metropolis of the Sicilian Greeks, a city as great in power and wealth and beauty as Athens herself, and victor at last in the long and fatal rivalry which indirectly involved the passing of the Hellenistic dominion of all the lands washed by the Ionian and Mediterranean seas.—Century.

Barefooted Waiting Maids in Japan.

Unless there are ladies among the guests the wife and daughters of the host do not appear at dinner in Japan. Before the meal begins it is customary for them to bring small cups of tea and dainty confectionery, when they take their survey of the party. If gentlemen only are present the Japanese hostess disappears after the greeting is over and does not return until the guests are taking their departure. At a signal from the host barefooted waiting maids, dressed in graceful and prettily tinted kimonos, bring in lacquer tray, bearing tiny covered bowls. Before setting the trays on the table the maids sink gracefully to their knees and bend forward till their foreheads touch the floor. Then they serve dinner, which is of several courses.—Smith's Weekly.

A Lively Paper Cutter.

Here is a little story which the English papers tell and any one is at liberty to believe if he will. No affidavits go with it. When Lord Dufferin was viceroy of India the maharajah of Indor paid him a visit and asked as a memento an ivory paper cutter belonging to Lord Dufferin. He consented, the Indian left, and the viceroy never saw him until some months later when the maharajah introduced a fine young elephant into the room. A pile of newspapers lay at Lord Dufferin's side. The animal went up to them, cut them neatly with his tusks, which had been purposely sharpened, and laid them in a neat heap on the floor, ready for perusal.

Great Britain's Rainfall.

Rainfall is a condition which has much to do with our health. A wet district with a good deal of swampy water, making houses damp, is a locality in which rheumatism and consumption are likely to prevail. Over England and Wales the average yearly rainfall is about thirty-four inches, in Scotland it reaches forty-six inches and in Ireland about thirty-eight inches. Possibly the wettest parts of Britain are in Cumberland, where the rainfall may attain 150 inches per year. One inch of rain on one acre of ground means a hundred tons of water.—London Graphic.

Heritages.

Leave children an accumulated fortune of memories and inspirations and examples and hopes, so that they are rich in brain and heart and soul and service. Then if you happen to leave them a fortune besides, if they have all these, the fortune will be shorn of its possibilities of evil and will become an instrument of higher and nobler good.—M. J. Savage.

Protection.

Mrs. Albee—Of course, you married Mr. Bebee for love? Mrs. Bebee—Well, yes, I suppose you would call it that. I married him to protect him from no less than three widows in our street. If I hadn't snapped him up one of them would have been sure to get him.

The Covetous Man.

Go not to a covetous old man with any request too soon in the morning, before he hath taken in that day's prey, for his covetousness is up before him, and he is in ill humor, but stay till the afternoon, till he be satiated upon some borrower.—Fuller.

Misery assails riches as lightning does the highest towers; or, as a tree that is heavy laden with fruit breaks its own boughs, so do riches destroy the virtue of their possessor.—Burton.

TO TELEGRAPH FROM POLE

Maxwell J. Smith, Wireless Operator of Wellman's Arctic Party.

Walter Wellman's trip in search of the north pole will be somewhat different from any hitherto undertaken. In the first place, the polar explorers will travel in the air instead of upon the land or sea. In the next place, the airship will carry wireless telegraph apparatus, and by means of this and shore stations in the far north it is hoped that constant communication may be maintained between the airship party and those watching eagerly the progress of the arctic tour from safe and comfortable latitudes in the inhabited part of the world.

If a message reading, "We have discovered the north pole," or words to that effect, should come by wireless and cable some fine day next August it will be a young man named Maxwell J. Smith who will have the honor of sending it. He has secured the difficult and dangerous post of wireless operator of the expedition. The party on the Wellman airship will be very small and select, and Smith will be one of the most important members of the expedition. On him will devolve the duty of telegraphing for aid if aid is needed as well as of announcing discoveries if fortune favors the object of the expedition. Mr. Wellman hopes by keeping in touch with the inhabited world by means of the wireless telegraph to avoid dangers that many other explorers have met. For the success of this part of the scheme he must rely on Mr. Smith and the American DeForest Wireless Telegraph company, which is to install the apparatus. Station No. 1 will be at Hammerfest, the farthest point north reached by cable companies. Station No. 2 will be on the ship Frithjof, which will lie off Spitzbergen, after carrying the Wellman party there, and station No. 3, in charge of Mr. Smith, will be on the airship itself.

Mr. Wellman's wireless expert is twenty-six years of age and is a native of Cape Cod, Mass. After attending school and college in St. Pierre, Miquelon he took up telegraphy and for three years was an operator for the Commercial Cable company. Afterward he worked as an operator in Central and South America. He began devoting himself to the wireless system as soon as its discovery was announced and for several years served as operator for the New York Herald on the Nantucket lightship. Afterward he installed wireless stations in Alaska, where he withstood temperatures as low as 70 degrees below zero.

He thus obtained an experience in an arctic climate which will stand him in good stead as a member of Wellman's party in the search for the north pole.

been completed for building over the Arkansas river at this point a solid steel suspension bridge stretching across the gorge from the brinks of the precipices on each side. The height of the bridge above the Arkansas river will be 2,400 feet, or in other words, it will be very nearly half a mile high. The stream is narrow and will look like a mere thread to a person standing upon the structure and looking down to the rushing waters far beneath. The length of the bridge will be 500 feet and street cars will be run over it.

The view obtained from the bridge will be one of the most remarkable to be had in the United States. The Brooklyn bridge, which is one of the marvels of engineering, is only 135 feet above the East river.
