PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.
 Mrs. Tyler donated a number of books to the library, among them was "Nedra", George Barr McCutcheon's last book. The following articles may be found in different magazines at the library: "Texas and the Texans", by M. G. Cunniff. How our biggest commonwealth has mastered the railroads and solved some of the problems that have baffled other states. A lustrous land of many climates and many kinds of Americans. The life of the million acre ranches, the rice and cotton farms, and the fast growing cities. How Galveston is rebuilt and deserts are reclaimed. An uncorrupted state marching toward a great future. An island redeemed from ruin by Americans. "Aggression" led by a shrewd and gentle Cape Cod fisherman. The growth of an immense fruit exporting business from insignificant beginning, and the building up of a strong American sentiment through commercial success and fairness. "The German Army" by William G. Fitzgerald. The largest and most scientifically organized force in the world, a model for most other armies. An explanation of the organization whereby ten million of trained men might be put under arms.
