Burlington Freight Depot Burns.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock, Tuesday night, the Burlington freight depot at this place was practically destroyed by fire, together with the freight therein and the old records stored in the attic. All the records of value in the agent's office were removed to a place of safety. The loss on the building is about $1,000. The loss in freight is placed at about $2,000. The fire was well advanced before discovery and all the city fire department and the company's fire department could hope to do was to confine the flames to the freight house and the accomplishing of such salvage as was possible. The building was dry and the freight and stored records in the attic made a stubborn and hot fire to control. The work of the departments on the whole was satisfactory and effective. The fire drill in effect in the agent's office was responsible for the quick and thorough work in removing the valuable and most essential records of his important office.

The origin of the fire is unknown, presumably the work of a passing engine.

As the old building was too small for the demands of the growing business of this station, the company will doubtless replace this one with a larger, more modern and up-to-date equipped freight depot.
