Memorial Sunday Services.

Union Memorial services were held in the Baptist church, last Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. Rev. J. Stewart Miller, of Edison, Nebraska, delivering the sermon. The members of the G. A. R. post, G. A. R. Ladies' Circle and W. R. C., Spanish-American war attended in organizations, meeting at Odd Fellows hall and marching to the church. The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

The sermon and music were inspiring and the occasion a worthy memorial to the departed soldiers and stimulative to the living.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Decoration day exercises partook of the usual characteristics. The old soldiers and auxiliary societies meeting at the G. A. R. hall in the morning at 9:30 o'clock, and a committee repairing to the cemeteries of the city and decorating the grave of the dead soldiers and of the deceased members of veterans' families. In fact few graves in the cemeteries were not remembered by families of the departed. While there was an unusual absence of flowers in this community there was no lack for purposes of tasteful and tender decoration—although past years have been more profuse.

The graves of the following veterans and others were formally decorated in the two cemeteries:

David Keithley	Smith G rdon
Marion B. Brown	Charles Turner
Chester Ward	Thomas M. Scott
R. S. Cooley	J. B. Farnsworth
Charles Fox	W. X. Johnson
J. B. McCabe	Lyman Miller
John D. Gervor	Josiah B. Roshong
Peter Groves	A. W. Schaeffer
Moses Battershall	C. L. Nettleton
William M. Irwin	Willard Matthews
Ellis H. Conrad	W. H. Benjamine
Charles Walker	John McCarl
Henry Walker	Edwin Farnsworth
LeRoy Wolfe	T. J. Pate
A. P. Welles	Andrew Phillips
Albert Hamilton, son of veteran	R. R. Stewart, confederate

Miss Budlong is entitled to much credit for her labors in this connection.

In the afternoon the following program was had in the Bixler opera house, with a good attendance and interest, the old soldiers and others marching to the opera house at the appointed hour, two o'clock:

Song by the public school children.
Prayer.
Reading of orders by the adjutant.

Hopi Indian Traditions.

The Hopi Indians of Arizona have no written literature, but an almost boundless store of oral traditions, which are handed down unimpaired to each generation in turn and which form the guiding principle of their religious belief and of their whole life. Says the Craftsman. Every clan, and there are a number of family clans making up the various Hopi towns, has its own kiva, or underground ceremonial chamber, entered by a ladder through a square opening in the roof, which is but a foot or two above the general level of the ground. Here the education of the boys is carried on, beginning at the age of seven or eight years. They are instructed day by day in the literature, history and myths of the tribes, the priests being the teachers. Without writing and without books the Hopi have an extensive literature, and that the utmost accuracy is observed in its oral transmission from generation to generation is revealed by certain comparisons with the records made by the Spanish explorers in the sixteenth century.

Long Sieges In Congress.

Samuel J. Randall of Pennsylvania was an avowed protectionist Democrat and a man who, his colleagues had learned, usually was able to get his way. Randall had first entered congress in 1802. He was a quiet, persistent, hardworking person who attracted little attention for several years. Then the Republicans, sure of their majority and wishing to expedite business, undertook to adopt rules which would prevent obstruction. The quiet Mr. Randall set himself against the attempt. He led the small Democratic majority with a skill so unusual that more than once he blocked the Republicans' way until it was too late to pass the measure. His endurance seemed unlimited. From one session lasting forty-six hours and twenty-five minutes, where Randall had forced the roll to be called seventy-five times, he came out as fresh as he went in. At another time in the fight over the force bill he was on the floor for seventy-two consecutive hours.—Ida M. Tarbell in American Magazine.

How Piutes Catch Quail.

The Piutes have a unique way of getting quail. For them there is no closed season or, indeed, any game law whatever. Seasons when the quail come down from the mountains to the spring the Indians make great preparation for their capture. They build a bough house with a long slender opening in the front formed of tall straight sticks set closely together. Within the house an Indian sits concealed, holding a long limber rod, which he operates dexterously through the narrow opening. In the early morning when the birds flock down for water he picks them off one at a time, killing them instantly. There is no report in this manner of hunting to frighten the others away, and the Indian often gets enough game in a single morning for the whole settlement.—Los Angeles Times.

Went to Bed For Dinner.

An amusing incident is told of the absentmindedness of the late Justice William G. Keogh of Ireland. It was at a bar dinner at his own house, and he had excused himself from the guests, who had already assembled, to go up stairs to dress. Time went by, but he did not reappear. The company sat patiently for some time till at length, when their appetites were getting the better of their manners and they were about to send a messenger in quest of their absent host, he appeared and explained with many apologies that imagining that he was retiring for the night he had undressed and got into bed. After an hour's sleep he awoke, and it suddenly dawned on him that his guests were waiting to dine with him below.

A Wedding Suit In 1756.

Jonathan Morrill and Hannah Hackett were married Dec. 29, 1756. This says the Journal of American History, is the receipt for his wedding suit:

Brass Buttons as witness our hands.

A Hero.

A beautiful of ladies and officers going to a picnic was swamped in crossing an East Indian river. A lady and an officer clung to an oar. "It is not enough for two," said the man. "Say goodbye for me to the regiment." Then he left his hold of the oar and of life. It is easy to see that a romance might be founded on this, but these are the plain facts.

The Scope of Indigestion.

Indigestion is not only the most prevalent of all diseases, but is the most far reaching in its complications, says Dr. Latson in Health Culture. In recognition of this fact a brilliant medical man has said:
"There is but one disease—indigestion."

Cayenne Pepper.

In cayenne pepper we have a pure, energetic, permanent stimulant. Why not use it instead of whisky and brandy, which are not more energetic and are not permanent in their actions? says Therapeutics and Dietsetics.

Like Father, Like Son.

The Living Skeleton—Why is the India rubber man so happy? The Fat Lady—Why, haven't you heard? He's the father of a bouncing boy!—Princeton Tigr.

Hooking the Wary Trout.

Trout when hungry usually face the current. This fact should be remembered when approaching a bridge or eddy where the "speckled beauties love to hide." If possible, such spots should be approached upstream. It may take a little more time to go around and come back up, but "make haste slowly" is said to be the first axiom of trout fishing. As the stream becomes warmer, the trout seek the cool pools and shaded places. They are to be found where a cold spring bubbles up into the stream or where a mountain creek enters. Often a number frequent the same haunt. Each additional fish means two more eyes to watch for the fisherman. One trout is all that is necessary to give a danger signal by darting away. The rest immediately follow suit. To catch more than one, or even that, in such a place takes skill in the use of the line. But who has said that trout fishing is not an art?—Circle Magazine.

Our Pygmy Ancestors.

The armor of the knights of the middle ages is too small for their modern descendants. Hamilton Smith records that two Englishmen of average dimensions found no suit large enough to fit either of them in the great collection of Sir Samuel Meyrick. The head of the oriental saber will not admit the English hand nor the bracelet of the Kafir warrior the English arm. The swords found in Roman tumuli have handles inconveniently small, and the great mediaeval two handed sword is now supposed to have been used only for one or two blows at the first onset and then exchanged for a smaller one. The statements made by Homer, Aristotle and Vitruvius represent six feet as a high standard for full grown men, and the irrefutable evidence of the ancient doorways, bedsteads and tombs proves the average size of the race certainly not to have diminished in modern days.—London Hospital.

Great Musician's Eccentricities.

Dolls were the idols, after his beloved instruments, of Domenico Dragonetti, the king of the double bass. He had a huge collection of these puppets dressed in various national costumes, and wherever Dragonetti went the dolls were sure to go. That was only one of this eccentric genius' peculiarities. He would never play unless his dog were in the orchestra, and nobody would have got a note out of him unless he had been permitted to sit in the orchestra next to the stage door. This was a precaution to enable him to save his wonderful instrument in case of fire. The instrument itself he brought from the monastery of St. Pietro when on a visit to Vincenza, and when he died he bequeathed it to St. Mark's, Venice, to be used at solemn services.—London Standard.

A Queer Coincidence.

While a serial story was running in a certain magazine a lady in Johannesburg wrote to the publisher asking whether Christian Lys (the author's nom de plume) was assumed or not. She herself was a Mrs. Lys, who was trying to trace an ancestor of her late husband, who was a descendant of Joan of Arc. Mr. Brebner, the author in question, wrote assuring her that his pen name was a family one, his forbears having come from Aberdeen. Strangely enough, it came out that her family came also from Aberdeen and their name was Brebner.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Pilgrims and Puritans.

The pilgrims, or, as they are often called, the "pilgrim fathers," were the seventy-four men and the twenty-eight women, members of the John Robinson's church, who sailed in the Mayflower from Leyden to North America and landed at Plymouth Rock, where they founded a colony Dec. 25, 1620. The Puritans were the English nonconformists who came over later, the name being given to them on account of their supposed great purity of doctrine, life and discipline.—New York American.

Cochineal.

Cochineal, so much used for coloring table jellies and also given to infants as a domestic remedy for whooping cough, is the whole insect of a class called coccus, but only the females are used. Why? Because the insects are captured by suffocating them with the smoke of fires below the trees on which they live, and as the males have wings, while the females have none, the gentlemen take to flight when the atmosphere becomes unpleasantly warm, leaving their ladies to their fate.

Warnings.

Mrs. Stubb—I notice so many married men save the receipted milliner bills. What use do they make of them? Mr. Stubb—Charity. Mrs. Stubb—Charity? Mr. Stubb—Yes; they are sent around to the bachelor clubs to warn any reckless member who might be thinking about plunging into the sea of matrimony.—Chicago News.

Her Postscript.

"Why does a woman always add a postscript to her letter?"
"Well," answered the ungallant wretch, "she probably figures out in her own mind what her letter has made you think and then tries to have the last word."

The Trouble.

Jones—I understand there is trouble between Mrs. Poet and her husband. Smith—Yes. He couldn't sell his poems, and she couldn't eat them, so she left him.

The man who gambles is a deluded fool, but the man who gambles when he continues to lose is a colossal fool.—Henry Sutphin.
