A Correction.

THE TRIBUNE was misinformed, last week, in its reference to E. D. Perkins and the Model Shoe store, in stating that he had gone into the firm as a partner. He is clerking in that establishment. The firm is unchanged—Fisher, Snider & Co.

A "Moonlight" Picnic.

Miss Wurts chaperoned a "moonlight" picnic of young folks of the city—many of them of the high school—Tuesday evening on the classic Driftwood. It was a delightful evening for the event and a joyous time was had.

Endeavors Picnic.

The members of the Endeavor society of the Congregational church indulged in a hay-ride and picnic at S. B. Rankin's on the Driftwood, Tuesday evening. It was a jolly party and they had a big time.

Dedicate Catholic Church at Imperial. Yesterday, Father Loughran dedicated a new church at Imperial. He was assisted by Fathers Fitzgerald of Red Cloud and Bickert of Oxford. A choir from McCook, Mrs. McKenna, Alice and Clara, Miss Elbert and Marie and Mr. Jos. Schmitz, furnished the music. About a year ago a few of the non-Catholics of Imperial thought that a Catholic church would be an improvement to the town. A special meeting was called. Bishop Bonocum and Father Loughran, were present at the meeting. A subscription was started and in less than an hour $1200 were pledged. The church complete, with art glass windows, but no furniture, cost $3,000, half of which was subscribed by non-Catholics. Yesterday was a gala day for Imperial.

BLEEDING A KING.

Louis XIV., a Greedy Physician and an Unscrupulous Surgeon.

In 1633, when Louis XIV. began to feel the first touches of age, his physicians ordered him to be bled once a month. That duty was of course entrusted to Marechal, his Irish surgeon.

There was at the time in Paris, says the British Medical Journal, a young brother of the craft who conceived the idea of making his fortune by bleeding the king. The enterprise was difficult, but he knew that the most solid doors can often be opened with a golden key.

Following the advice of Iago, he put money in his purse and sought an introduction to Antoine Daquin, the king's chief physician. The negotiation was conducted on a strict business footing. Daquin, who was known to love money, was told that 10,000 crowns were deposited with a notary who had instructions to transfer the sum to him as soon as the surgeon had got the job.

It was not an easy thing to manage, as Marechal never left the king. One day, however, he asked permission to leave Versailles for three days. Daquin seized the opportunity to introduce his protegee, whom he had ready at hand for the purpose. Feeling the king's pulse one morning, as usual, he pretended to be alarmed at its strength and volume and ordered the illustrious patient to be bled forthwith. As Marechal was away, the king hesitated, but fear soon made him yield to his physician's proposal. The young surgeon bled the king, and Daquin got his money.

In the meantime a message had been dispatched for Marechal, who was not far off. He returned to Versailles in haste and was much surprised to find that the king, whom he had left in the best of health, had been bled. He was not on friendly terms with Daquin, and he quickly grasped the situation. He went to see the young surgeon and forced him to disclose the whole plot.

When the king learned the truth, he flew into a terrible rage, ordered Daquin to be arrested and placed the matter in the hands of the council of state. That obsequious body, after a very short deliberation, unanimously voted that the physician who had trafficked in the blood of the king deserved death. The royal wrath, however, subsided to some extent, and he graciously spared Daquin's life, but deprived him of his office and exiled him from the court to Quimper-Corentin. The too greedy physician did not long survive his disgrace.—London Standard.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Cheerfulness is a great aggravation to an angry man.

Nearly every one thinks he is a good judge of human nature.

You can't do anything very well if you don't want to do it.

It is not difficult to prove you are right from your own point of view.

How people economized in the old days! But not many people do it now.

Some men would do wonderful things if some little thing were not in the way.

When a boy wants a favor from his parents he asks his father's permission and tells his mother he is going to do it.

The average friendship is wrecked upon the fact that the average person's idea of a friend is some one he can impose upon.—Atchison Globe.

Burro Drivers Carry Candles.

In Mexico all vehicles, be they hand-cart, automobile or anything between, must carry a light at night. This rule or law is rigidly enforced. Even the drivers of the poor little burro or mule carts, on their two wheels, must carry a light. So, rather than buy lanterns, which cost money, they take a dip candle, and wrapping it in a bit of newspaper to shield it from the wind carry it in their left hand as they drive along homeward from work after evening has fallen. The effect is striking, as the light falling strongly on the Indian driver throws the face of the man into strong relief against the darkness.—Modern Mexico.

English Jurors' Remuneration.

The scale of remuneration of English common jurymen is absurd. In a civil case in England a common jurymen is allowed 5 shillings ($1.25) a day for "a view"—that is, for inspecting any property or thing in dispute—but otherwise he is, in law, not entitled to any remuneration. It is usual, however, in the high court to give him a fee of 1 shilling and in the counties 8 pence. Special Jurymen receive much higher remuneration. The fee in the county court is 1 shilling a case, in the mayor's court 2 pence and in the London sheriff's court 4 pence.—Chambers' Journal.

Not Hopeful.

"Tis a fine, elegant husband you have, ma'am," said Maggie. "Him and me was talkin' about Ireland this mornin'." He's traveled as far as many a gentleman. And there ain't many husbands as good to their wives, ma'am. Look how he brings you lettuce and things from the market. But dear, dear! That kind never lives long.—Newark News.

Independent Criticism.

A little girl sat gazing fixedly at the new bonnet of one of her mother's visitors until the caller smilingly asked, "Do you like it, my dear?" The child innocently replied: "Yes, I do. Mamma and Aunt Milly said it was a perfect fright, but it doesn't frighten me a bit."

He who commits an injustice is ever made more wretched than he who suffers it.—Plato.
