Burlington House Cleaning.

The entire "Q" system is now undergoing a house cleaning unprecedented in her history, an operation which will cost the company many thousands of dollars.

Right-of-way is being cleared of all unsightly objects, weeds burned, tincans buried, yard and mile posts painted and stones piled at their feet and whitewashed, station properties and surroundings are being placed in most attractive condition possible, enfin, the Burlington is being made to look her prettiest in anticipation of the Democratic national convention in Denver, which will attract thousands of people to the west, many of them coming over the Burlington.

Every community along the Burlington might well emulate this example and show her best foot to the visitors.

Congressman G W. Norris writes that it will not be possible for him to be home in time to deliver the address on Memorial Day. Conditions in Washington, he expects, will keep him there several weeks, possibly, longer than he expected. This fact will be regretted by his home friends who expected the pleasure of a fine effort from him on that occasion.

For the six months ending March 31st, 1908, the Burlington in Nebraska had gross earnings of $9,977,637,21; operating expenses, $5,714,534,45; leaving $4,262,102,76. From this deducting $384,846.05, one-half taxes for the year ending March 31, 1908, the net earnings for the entire Burlington system in 1906, ending June 30, as reported, were $7,579,516.67.

LET nobody be deceived into the belief that the Missouri-born "let us alone" "prosperity association" which has been making itself prominent the past two weeks represents the public opinion of any city or state. Nominally the association is an organization of western business men to plead for political peace until business has improved. Actually it is a movement engineered by eastern railroads in the effort to check the public efforts to regulate the railroads. It belongs with the numerous decoy organizations launched by the railroads during the rate bill debate in 1905 and 1906 .- Lincoln Journal.
