Bryan or his political associates in 1908, as follows: Nebraska, for neither he nor they Sol Premer, judge of election, Alliance have helped to work out these bettered conditions. When these practical things were being done Candi- FA Puckett, judge of election, Alliance date Bryan was always somewhere else talking up his candidacy at $500 a talk.

The Nebraska people, proud of the progress of their state, in business and government, owes nothing to Can- S G Bastian, judge of election, Beaver didate Bryan for any constructive a. sistance rendered by him.

The material conditions in the state are such as to hold the public mind in an optimistic mood and optimism is an antidote to Bryanism.

Corn is high and it's a corn state. Wheat is high and it's a wheat state. Cattle are high and it's a cattle state.

Hogs are high and it's a hog state. Land is high, going higher every day and it's a land state, and it's a state of farmer voters.

Governor Sheldon has made an enviable record with the Nebraska people by being a courageous, levelheaded, strong, manly man in the executive office. As the leader of the party in this campaign he attracts universal respect for his high character and universal confidence for his broad minded fairness as an executive. Taking all these things into consideration one can see nothing in the outlook for the coming election but the usual republican majority in Nebraska,
