FINANCIAL AND ARTISTIC SUCCESS.

Such Was Achieved in the Production of "A Modern Woodman" by Local Talent, Last Week.

The putting on the boards, Thursday and Friday of last week, of "A Modern Woodman," served two good purposes, two evenings of good, clean entertainment for the people of McCook at popular prices.

That the efforts of those engaged in the play were appreciated is evidenced by the presence and applause of good 16-oz. 2-bu. seamless grain bags 211/2c. audiences on both appearances.

Lieut. Walter M. Ellis, author of the play, gave a finished production of Ned Burke, the returned Rough Rider. Dr. S. C. Beach as John McFarland, the absconding cashier, quite divided the honors with the lieutenant. Teddy, of the 400, found in George expression, "Don't you know." Ray Shriner's "Schlitz" who hates the Irish was exuberantly Deutsch, hearty and redolent of wienerwurst.

Ray is a Dutch doodle, ain't it? As Conklin, a cowboy, Frank Ploussard had a fine swagger and the air and freedom of the plains in heroic degree.

Howard Finity gave a dignified and successful offering of William Noble, the Woodman.

Master Robert Smith played the character of Willie Noble, a newsboy, in a most creditable manner.

Chester DeLoy made a distinct hit, a big black spot, as George Augustus Snow, a son of Ham.

Clifford Burbridge as mail carrier No. 1, U.S. government, was prompt and pert as you please.

Miss Ethel Morrissey as Alice, the banker's daughter, played a strong and debility, skin eruptions, indigestion, Morrissey in the role of Jennie, the Price $1.00. Woodman's daughter, was not a whit Maggie, who hates the Dutch, was given splendid treatment by Sadie Everist, an Irish sketch artist of recognized local ability.

Mrs. Fred Schagel gave a subdued and quiet performance of the Woodman's widow.

Clifford Burbridge doubled very nicely as policeman 44 of the force.

E. S. Howell as consul of camp No. 725; Julius Kunert, advisor; G. H. Watkins, banker; John M. Smith, clerk; all made good and furnished one of the best scenes of the evening in Act 4,-Woodcraft by officers of Camp 633 and team of Foresters.

One of the features of the evening was the drill by the team of Forerters under command of E. S. Howell. The team is composed of C. F. Knosp, Don Walters, Lou Knoche, Leon Hileman, Fred Ebert, Lee Stevens, Harry Hamilton, George Whittaker, Charles Turner, Bud Browne, Kirk Marshall.

Miss Ruth Wiehe did acceptable work as pianist, being assisted by Mr. Harvey Snyder on the closing evening.

The play was given under the auspices of Noble Camp No. 663, Modern Woodman of America to boost their log-roll ing fund.

The moral was: Take out a Woodman policy.

Here to Stay

We have just entered the second year of the life of this institution and we expect to be here in the banking business for years to come. We are a fixture here, and take this opportunity of expressing to the people our appreciation of the confidence and good will manifested. We ask for a continuance of the same, and will try by strictly adhering to commonsense business rules to be worthy of the patronage of the people. We will never say to a man or woman, be they patrons or not, when applying for a loan, that it will be contingent upon the election of any presidential candidate. We will make loans to any worthy applicant when good and sufficient security is given, regardless of the outcome of any presidential election, and we don't believe the people of this community will endorse the course of any business man who imposes such
